

Man May Ride to Stars in 'Frozen Sleep'

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Experiments to determine if man can be frozen solid for years-long trips to other solar systems are under way at the University of California at Los Angeles.

Dr. John Lyman of UCLA's biotechnology laboratory plans to freeze mice and rats and believes his findings can be used to turn humans into ice-like statues for trips through space.

"The big problem is not getting man into space," Dr. Lyman said in an interview Monday. "The problem is to keep him from becoming psychotic—going insane—under the unnatural conditions and confinement of space flight."

Giving man a natural environment—building space ships big enough to provide oxygen, food and social and recreational facilities—may be prohibitive in cost, Dr. Lyman believes.

The best answer, he said, is frozen sleep. The voyager would not need food, oxygen or companionship. His ship would be operated by electronic brains and he would be revived by an automatic warming process as he neared his destination.

Within two weeks, Dr. Lyman and his associates will begin dunking mice in dry ice and alcohol baths to reduce their temperatures to as low as 100 degrees below zero.

"Experiments with monkeys have shown that their temperature can be lowered to 39.2 degrees for up to two hours without detectable after-effects," Dr. Lyman said. "The monkeys, however, were merely in a stage of hibernation."

"What we want to do is to stop the life processes completely, then resume them at will."

"If we can do this with man, he will arrive at a distant star—which might take him several normal lifetimes to reach—not one day older than he was when he left earth."

Another frozen sleep would bring the space traveller home years or even centuries after his departure, said Dr. Lyman, and he would have aged only for the period between frozen sleeps.

'Those Balloons' Sold in Quebec

The 64 centennial balloons, which ballooned into the biggest farce of centennial year, were sold today to a city in Quebec province.

Five Freed, Three Guilty In IWA Case

GRAND FALLS, Nfld. (CP)—Five loggers, members of the International Woodworkers of America (IWA), were acquitted today on a charge of creating mischief and damage but three others were sentenced to three months in jail or a $300 fine.

Magistrate G. B. Trickett said there was no evidence against five of the loggers except they were in a group of 79 loggers arrested Feb. 7 following a raid on two Anglo-Newfoundland Development Company woods camps in the Sandy Lake area.

He also ordered the three convicted men to post bonds of $250 each to assure they would keep the peace for the next two years.

Reds Menace To Castro

MIAMI, Fla. (AP)—A group of revolutionaries against the Fidel Castro regime in Cuba is spawning in Miami, the Miami News said today.

It quoted a former Castro companion, Rafael Del Pino, as saying Castro is blind to a Communist menace and "we still have time to work underground against his government if it isn't cleaned up."

Ald. Geoffrey Edgell, chairman of Greater Victoria Centennial Committee which purchased the balloons from England for $6,000, said the deal was confirmed by Granby, Que., in a telegram.

The French-Canadian city celebrates its centennial this year.

Price was not disclosed but Ald. Edgell said no loss will be suffered. He said the price would be revealed after final details are completed.

"The money from this sale will go into the trust fund established by the committee for a Greater Victoria civic auditorium," Ald. Edgell said.

"When we finally close our books, we have hopes that the trust fund will stand at about $15,000."

He said it was "significant" that the provincial government had shown enthusiasm for the committee's decision to establish the trust fund.

INTO STORAGE

The balloons, about seven feet in diameter with gondolas suspended beneath, were purchased early last year to decorate the downtown area during centennial celebrations.

But the project came to grief when the balloons deflated as rapidly as they were installed. They finally were put in storage, to the amusement of citizens.

Cyprus Talks Threatened

LONDON (AP)—Archbishop Makarios today refused to work with the Greek government delegation to the London conference of the future of Cyprus, Greek circles said.

The attitude of the exiled leader of Greek Cypriots could torpedo the conference, which opened Tuesday to work out independence for Cyprus.

British government sources were unable to confirm the latest tangled development in the London conference, already snarled by a plane crash.

The conference was adjourned today to give Turkish Premier Adnan Menderes time to recover from injuries suffered Tuesday in the crash of an airliner bringing him from Ankara.

Highly authoritative British sources said it was possible Greek Foreign Minister Evangelos Averoff would officially inform Foreign Secretary Selwyn Lloyd of Makarios' stand at a meeting later in the day. Turkey and Greece reached an agreement on independence for the troubled Mediterranean island at a conference at Zurich last week.

As reports of dissension mounted, an emergency meeting of the five-party conference was summoned for tonight.

Mrs. Thelma Owen's rink from Kelowna continued undefeated in the B.C. ladies' curling championships, today defeating Vancouver Island champion Mrs. Kay Wright of Alberni 12-10.

It was the fourth straight win for the Okanagan rink in the seven-rink, round-robin competition.

Labor Curb Hints by Wicks In 'Brinkmanship' Speech

By PETE LOUDON
Times Legislative Reporter

Labor Minister Lyle Wicks dropped some vague hints today in a speech to the B.C. legislature to curb the wings of B.C. labor.

But he didn't go so far as to make definite proposals—his speech posed more questions than it gave answers, despite predictions by apprehensive labor leaders.

One request by various industrial groups—that trade unions be required to be registered under the Societies Act—appeared to have the minister's support.

He said: "One thing now remains very clear, there must be some responsibility—equal responsibility on both sides of the fence."

ALL DIFFERENT

But generally speaking, members in the House, labor delegates in the public galleries and "veteran observers" all read different meanings into his address.

He did, however, refute Opposition charges that the government aimed to smash labor in B.C.

His address contrasted sharply with remarks in recent days by two other cabinet ministers, Highways Minister P. A. Gagliardi and Works Minister W. N. Chant, who hit at "gangsters" among labor leaders.

The first hour of his 1½-hour speech was a review of labor department affairs. The minister made it clear there will be no change in the status of the present part-time Labor

Fare Rate Hike For Viscounts?

Trans-Canada Air Lines officials have indicated that fares will be increased on the Victoria-Vancouver-Seattle service when Viscount aircraft are introduced.

Times publisher Stuart Keate wired this information here Tuesday after conferring with senior TCA officials in Montreal as a spokesman for Greater Victoria intermunicipal committee and the Chamber of Commerce.

Mr. Keate, due to carry protests to deputy transport minister J. R. Baldwin today against Pacific Western Airlines' bid to take over the service, said TCA confirmed it "will be pleased to continue the service" if PWA's application is rejected by the air transport board.

"These officials flatly deny (Victoria MP A. deB.) McPhillips' assertion that TCA will not carry on," Mr. Keate said.

"But they point out that some rate adjustment will be necessary in view of the fact that the per-mile rate of approximately 10 cents is the lowest in North America."

Turbo-propeller Viscounts are being considered for the service, but costs will go up because depreciation written off against the present DC-3 aircraft must be applied to the new planes.

Mr. Keate also said there is no truth to the rumor that TCA will buy Rotodynes—a cross between a helicopter and conventional aircraft—now.

"They see this four or five years away," he said.

Acting Mayor Arthur Dowell said he was "delighted" that TCA has refuted Mr. McPhillips' statement and that they are prepared to carry on.

"The city will do everything possible to protect the PWA application."

"If the TCA rates must be increased, then the city will study that aspect at the appropriate time."

"But the main thing is to keep TCA here because it would be a severe loss to Victoria if it's position as the western terminus of a transcontinental service was dropped."

Temporary Run For 3 Months

Canadian Pacific Railway today announced it will operate a stop-gap "austerity" service between Victoria and Vancouver from Feb. 25 to May 15 when regular summer ferry service resumes.

The company will employ the Princess Marguerite on a daily round-trip schedule, leaving Vancouver at 10.30 a.m. and arriving at Victoria 2.45 p.m. for a half-hour lay-over. Return trip leaves Victoria at 3.15 p.m. and arrives at Vancouver at 7.30 p.m.

The present daily Victoria-Vancouver-Seattle service ends Feb. 25. It will be resumed May 15 and is expected to continue towards the latter part of September as in the past.

REVIEW

What happens then, the CPR has not said. It is understood that it will conduct a comprehensive review of the situation at that time.

Box score on representations made last week by Attorney General Robert Bonner and Times publisher Stuart Keate as a municipal and Chamber of Commerce delegate, shows:

1. Vancouver-Victoria day service will continue until the end of summer schedule;
2. Victoria-Seattle service ends Feb. 25, resumes May 15 and ends in September;
3. Victoria-Vancouver mid-night service ends for all time Feb. 25;
4. Victoria-Port Angeles summer service will not be resumed.

Meanwhile, Washington State Ferries plans to start a Sidney-Anacortes day service Feb. 26 which will provide the only winter connection with Seattle.

WSF also has applied to the U.S. coast guard for a permit to start its Victoria-Port Angeles service May 15, when the CPR usually starts this run. Normally, WSF begins in mid-June.

Local officials hailed the CPR's reversal of its plans to shut down completely its winter connections to Victoria.

RELUCTANTLY
Company officials said the reversal was made "reluctantly" in view of expected losses.

Acting Mayor Arthur Dowell and Saanich Reeve George Chatterton said the still-fluid ferry situation should be hardened into some

'He'll Stay' Says Ike Of Dulles

WASHINGTON (AP)—

President Eisenhower said today he wants State Secretary Dulles to remain on the job as long as Dulles believes he is able to carry on.

Eisenhower told his press conference that he and Dulles agreed Tuesday during Eisenhower's visit to Walter Reed Army Hospital to go right ahead with plans for international conferences.

He said he has given no thought to naming an alternate negotiator if Dulles is physically unable to attend the conferences because of his illness with cancer.

NO OTHERS DISCUSSED

Moreover, Eisenhower said he has not discussed with anyone the possibility of replacing Dulles as secretary of state.

Eisenhower said Dulles had never made the specific statement that he wanted to resign.

Eisenhower made it clear there is nothing about the secretary's illness that is going to touch his heart or his head.

Eisenhower went on to say that Dulles is his closest friend and confidant. In the whole complicated business of foreign affairs, Eisenhower went on, no man has the equal of Dulles' wisdom and knowledge.

So long as Dulles himself believes he has the ability to carry on, Dulles is exactly the man he wants, Eisenhower said.

AFRICANS JUST STARE

Silent Welcome For Queen Mother

KISUMU, Kenya (AP)—The Queen Mother got the silent treatment here today.

Thousands of Negroes lined the streets of this west Kenya port on Lake Victoria. But in contrast to cheering crowds elsewhere on her East African tour, they just stared silently as she rode by.

The cool reception came after Oginga Odinga, chairman of the African-elected members of the Kenya legislative council, told Africans: "Go and see her if you wish, but in view of the current political situation, she should not be given a really warm welcome."

Odinga is a staunch opponent of the government's land reform program.

CPR HEAD LEADS ATTACK

U.S. Tariff Policy Hit

OTTAWA (UPI)—Two prominent Canadians, one from government and the other from private industry, today accused the U.S. of imposing high tariff restrictions against this country "for political expediency" and thus denying both nations "the fruits of economic progress."

The charges were made by the trade department's director of international relations,

Ben Schwartzmann, and CPR president N. R. Crump at a one-day Canadian-American business conference sponsored by the chambers of commerce of the two nations.

Mr. Crump lashed out hardest. The policy of protectionism between the North American neighbor nations was not of Canada's making, he said.

"Rather it is discernible in the growing number of restrictions which, for reasons which appear to be no other than political expediency, the United States has chosen to impose on an already impressive range of resource imports including lead, zinc and petroleum."

Schwartzmann said trade barriers erected by the U.S. were "putting back the clock."

U.S. tariffs on manufactured goods were "at prohibitive levels in many cases," he said.

NORMAN CRIBBENS IN THE LEGISLATURE

There has been so much talk of pies in the House lately that it almost seems as if the pie-custard or otherwise—is becoming a sort of yardstick of government in this province.

Mines Minister Kenneth Kiernan told us recently that revenues were like a pie which had to be served out in equitable slices, and if we wanted bigger slices we must make a bigger pie.

Education Minister Leslie Peterson produced a symbolic pie in reference to universities and then along came Mrs. Lois Haggen from Grand Forks bearing a pie with meringue on top of it.

Indifferent cooks, she said, often use meringue to cover up their sins. And she added:

"It was the meringue of the Throne Speech which made me sceptical. It looked too good. Now that we have got into the pie, well, some of the filling is good but I am not so sure that I can compliment the government on its crust."

Herbert Bruch, the member for Esquimalt, produced a fourth pie and threw it at the CCF Opposition. "What they really want," he told the House, "is not a bigger slice off one pie; they want two pies!"

Mr. Bruch, although on the government side of the House, carefully dissociated himself from recent charges of "gangsterism" hurled at trade union leaders by Works Minister W. N. Chant and Highways Minister P. A. Gagliardi.

"There has been far too much of this name-calling where our trade unions are concerned and I deplore it," Mr. Bruch said.

Many observers believe the government is actually testing public opinion on this matter before presenting legislation aimed at curbing the power of the unions.

Dan Campbell (SC, Comox), Don Robinson (SC, Lillooet), and others have indicated they will support Mr. Bruch in defending the unions.

Most visitors agree that the standard of oratory in the legislature is pretty good. But many members spoil their speeches with that pitfall of the pulpit: "Just one word more, Brethren," which usually means that up to a thousand will follow.

When a speaker reaches a fine climax and then goes on to add after-thoughts it produces the anti-climax.

Perhaps it was wishful thinking that impelled Premier Bennett to move adjournment of the House until 2 p.m. Wednesday night.

What would we do with Wednesday afternoon?

When listening to speeches by his cabinet ministers, the Premier reminds me irresistibly of Jack Hylton, the dynamic British band leader. If one of the band gave a solo, Hylton would sit back in his chair, arms folded, and look over the audience with an expression which said:

"How fortunate you are to hear such fine musicians!" ... even when you had paid an excessive price to stand up in the back circle.

In a House that is predominantly male, the two lady members—Mrs. Buda Brown (SC, Vancouver-Point Grey), and Mrs. Lois Haggen—enjoy the admiration of all party groups.

And they manage to compete sartorially with the vivid red carpet on the floor of the chamber. Mrs. Brown competes with bright shades of blue, alternating with black dresses. Mrs. Haggen favors grey suits with fancy neckwear.

C of C Group Plans Charity Plea Probe

Directors of Victoria Chamber of Commerce will be asked Friday to approve a recommendation from two Chamber committees calling for the setting up of a Solicitations Group to investigate appeals for charitable donations and complimentary advertising.

Public Affairs group of the Chamber Tuesday added its support to the move which already has won the approval of the Retail Merchants section.

The Public Affairs group, however, will recommend that the directors consider deleting one section of the rules governing the operation of the Solicitations group.

Acting on the motion of Dr. Hugh Borsman the PA group wants deleted "that the Solicitations Group would not recommend for cash or other donations, requests from religious, sporting, fraternal, veteran and similar organizations and clubs."

MUST BE RECOGNIZED

Dr. Borsman claimed that a large majority of appeals come from these groups "and you have to recognize them."

The Solicitations Group plan, submitted by W. A. Laudrum and Eric Mallet, calls for members to pay a $5 annual fee. For this they would get a card for their premises identifying them as members of the group and they would make no donations unless canvassers had been screened and been given a letter of approval from the Solicitations Group. Possession of the letter would indicate the appeal had been investigated as to its worth.

Chamber secretary John Coppinger said the $5 fee would "barely cover" the cost of the service. He felt members could save that amount in "just a few months."

Mr. Coppinger said the plan has worked successfully in Winnipeg for 15 years. Winnipeg also has a Better Business Bureau, but Mr. Coppinger said he knew of no BBB which looked directly into such matters.

Chamber member Forrest

FLAMING SHISHKEBAB TOO HOT FOR CALGARY

CALGARY (CP)—City cocktail lounges may have to take delicacies such as shishkebab and crepe suzettes off their menus in the near future, a fire department spokesman said today.

The sale of these foods, which are carried flaming to the customer's table, may be in contravention to a city fire bylaw which states "no open flame shall be allowed in places of public assembly."

Fire department is investigating a flash fire in a dining lounge Monday night in which waiter Lester Zarkos suffered serious burns to the face, chest, head, arms and hands when a fluid being poured over a shishkebab ignited.

Four Island Sitzings Set For Education Commission

The chairman of the Chant Royal Commission on education Monday announced local and dates of four hearings on Vancouver Island and one at Powell River.

Dean S. N. F. Chant of the University of British Columbia said the commission will begin its latest hearings at Duncan March 16. The following day it will sit in Nanaimo. Subsequent sittings will be in Qualicum Beach, March 18; Courtenay, March 19, and Powell River, March 20.

Dean Chant said five copies of briefs to be submitted to the commission should be in his hands at least two weeks in advance of hearings. The commission has held hearings in 21 centres throughout B.C. since it was established in January of last year to investigate all educational matters up to university level, with the exception of finance.

Dean Chant said the commission hopes to complete its investigations in the spring following hearings in the Okanagan and the north coastal area.

"We can only give clearance to projects of a charitable nature," the union said. "They termed the coming show 'strictly a commercial venture.'"

Thus, "the Musicians' Union appears to be in a position to dictate to the armed services," Mr. Davidson said.

"A precedent has already been set. The band did appear at the recent annual minor hockey league night—a show of a nature similar to the one we plan."

"This was done without charge or honorarium."

He pointed out that funds derived from the coming show would all go towards the projected ice surface, to be located behind Memorial Arena, which is expected to cost $148,000.

'If You Shoot It Means War' Warns Mr. K.

MOSCOW (AP)—Premier Khrushchev warned today that any attempt by the Western Allies to shoot their way to West Berlin would mean war with the Soviet Union.

"No encroachments against East German territory," in the centre of which Berlin is situated, can be tolerated—either by land, water or air," Khrushchev declared in a speech at Tula, an industrial centre 120 miles south of Moscow.

Khrushchev said some Western statesmen "try to frighten us by saying if we prevent them reaching West Berlin, they would begin to shoot."

CRY WAR
"But to everybody it is evident that if they begin to shoot, this will mean the beginning of war," he said.

The Western powers have proposed a big-four foreign ministers talk on Germany this spring but have not said what action they would take if the Soviets carry out their threat.

There have been reports armed convoys or an airlift have been proposed to defy the East Germans.

The Soviet bloc, Khrushchev said, is prepared to sign a peace treaty with both West and East Germany—"or with one of them." If Russia signs such a treaty with East Germany, he continued, that nation "will acquire all the rights and obligations of a sovereign state."

Khrushchev hailed as "worthy of attention" a call by U.S. Senator Mike Mansfield (Dem., Mont.) for direct unity talks between the East and West German governments and for a central European zone free of nuclear weapons.

The shooting of Sosa Blanco brought to 303 the unofficial total of those executed.

New Satellite 'Crude' But Holds Big Promise

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Scientists fondly described the world's first weather satellite today as "crude and primitive" but bearing the seeds of revolution.

Vanguard II, launched Tuesday at Cape Canaveral, Fla., will do today's forecasts no good. But its descendants, weather experts predicted, will.

—Spot the birth, track, and report the intensity of hurricanes, and possibly tornadoes.

—For the first time observe and report global weather on a global basis.

—Make possible accurate long-range forecasts and, perhaps, predictions of climate changes centuries in the making.

—Give man the fuller understanding of weather he must have before he can hope to control it.

126 MINUTES

Vanguard II, a 20-inch sphere weighing 21½ pounds, is circling the globe every 126 minutes in an orbit which will keep it aloft—estimates vary—from 10 to hundreds of years and perhaps forever.

It carries little photocells which scan the cloud cover on a band of earth about 600 miles wide north of the equator.

The photocells' information is dispatched to earth by radio.

Vanguard II's information is expected to contribute largely to information on the relation of cloud cover to weather.

But its instruments have a designed lifetime of only two weeks—and it will take about two weeks to process and interpret each broadcast from the satellite. So daily forecasts won't benefit from them.

Dr. Harry Wexler, chief of the weather bureau's scientific services division, said Vanguard II is the "indispensable first step" toward the network

Squeeze on Higher Education

JUDGE J. B. CLEARHUE, chairman of the Victoria College Council, has made public that body's plans for essential expansion and has set out the College's immediate needs.

"This year," he says, "we are asking the Provincial Government for a grant of $405,650. . . . We felt that this amount is necessary in order to allow us to carry on."

The College, its council chairman explains, draws revenue from three sources—a conditional grant from the Canada Council, "the rest . . . from the Provincial Government and student fees."

This year Mr. Bennett's budget falls about $100,000 short of the amount the College sought from the Government.

Unless an adequate supplementary estimate is forthcoming, that appears to mean one of two things. Either the College will have to cut down on essentials, or it will have to raise student fees.

In any event the fees will probably go up, possibly by $100. This is the case because Victoria College is tied to the University of British Columbia and has a fee structure equivalent to that at Point Grey.

And at Point Grey the Board of Governors' request for $2,226,000 more than was provided by the Government last year has been answered by an apparent increase of $650,000.

Faced with the difficulty of bridging the gap between $2,226,000 and the $650,000 that has been allowed, the university authorities have forecast the $100 fee increase.

Should that course be followed, students at the two centres of higher learning in British Columbia will be paying more than other universities in Western Canada.

Mr. Leslie Peterson has argued that the University can maintain existing services at an increased level of cost, engage additional staff to cope with increased enrolment and raise salaries of the academic staff without raising fees, if the university will follow suggestions he outlines.

According to computation made by the Department of Education, says the minister, this can be accomplished by using the Provincial Government grant "together with other revenue available to the University and the application of a portion of their revenue surplus to normal expenses."

The minister also says it is unfair

"for anyone to try and lay the responsibility for any fee increase on this Government."

Mr. Peterson's protestations do not coincide with the opinions of university authorities. They have arrived at a requirement this year of $2,226,000 more than last and have been given, by the Government, less than one-third of that amount, as the budget stands.

It should be noted, moreover, that the people who have determined these requirements are informed men, competent in business and specializing in the affairs of the university.

On the basis of their figuring, fee increases seem inevitable.

Such a development would detract substantially from the bright promise of the Government to assist more able students.

Mr. Bennett has announced the Government's intention of paying half the fees of first class students, one-third of the fees of higher-ranking second class students.

That is a highly worthwhile reward for excellence in studies. But if fees are raised $100 above the basic $220 minimum now listed for the faculty of arts and science, this would mean that the benefits for the most preferred class would be sharply reduced.

Instead of having to pay only $110—half the existing minimum fee—such a student would face a $160 charge. And those not assisted, the large number of students who make respectable pass marks, would be saddled with the burden of paying at least $320.

What applies at the University applies equally at Victoria College.

Judge Clearhue has pointed out the revenue sources at Mount Tolmie. For all practical purposes, his explanation is that what the College needs beyond what is provided by the Provincial Government must be raised by fees.

Mr. Peterson, in his remarks to the legislature has emphasized the point that "it is not my prerogative, or that of this Government to determine what expenditures the University shall or shall not make. This is a responsibility which properly falls within the exclusive jurisdiction of the board of governors."

Why, then, does he protest that it would be unfair "for anyone to try and lay the responsibility for any fee increase on this Government?" Universities do not raise fees unless they have to.

More Perspective, Please

MR. HUGH CHRISTIE, Warden of Oakalla Prison, seems to take in a lot of territory when he says that modern parents are doing "a pretty doggone crummy job" of raising their children.

Perhaps he is right, but in the vast preponderance of cases, we suggest, if the parents fail it is not for lack of effort.

Mr. Christie knows, and so does everyone else who studies delinquency, that a relatively few boys and girls get into serious trouble despite the complexities of modern law and life.

If judgment is to be passed on the basis of percentage, the small number of children involved in unacceptable behaviour indicates a measure of success on the part of parents as a whole.

Beyond that, it is safe to say that never in history has so much been written by so many experts, genuine and phony, on the proper care and rearing of children. And never have so many people, including parents, read and tried to profit by the advice of authorities.

Maybe Mr. Christie should stand back a little further to gain a broader perspective. Certainly too many fathers and mothers fail woefully in setting examples for their children.

On the other hand, a great number of them behave in a way that promotes respect in their offspring and encourages good citizenship. Not all parents, Mr. Christie will understand, are included in the number who become known professionally to prison wardens and social workers.

... "Wrote a piece for the papers . . . advice for the flu season . . . avoid crowds, late hours . . . ease up on smoking . . . simple, but effective . . ."

CHARITY AT THE GRASS ROOTS

By B. A. TOBIN

Givers and Donors—Both are Needed

CHARITY is collecting and using more millions of dollars today than ever before, yet it is becoming more and more difficult to be charitable.

Through-out this continent community chests, united funds and similar arrangements are being used to gather in the financial backing that is needed to operate the hundreds of organizations that dispense charity. For all the charitable causes from unborn babies to the very elderly who have breathed their last, there are societies, groups, committees, associations designed to help with money, advice and professional care.

The arts of advertising, developed to their highest pitch, are applied to fund raising. The time and ability of industrial and business executives, which would cost hundreds of thousands of dollars a year to buy, are given voluntarily and to an ever-increasing amount, in cities throughout Canada and the United States each year.

The totals of those receiving help and those contributing to it rise every year. Yet real charity plays less and less part in it.

How can that be?

The answer is that real charity should not be confused with mere help. Essentially it is a direct contact between giver and receiver; it involves a sequence of the giver's discovery of the other's need, the rousing of conscience, and the voluntary sacrifice of the giver's time and energy as he meets the need.

It means that you give bread to a hungry man, clothes to a shivering child; that you bind the wounds of the injured; house in your own house the homeless.

It means that you devote personal time, personal effort, personal possessions to those who require help. Despite the millions of dollars involved in charity drives, not much of the public response meets those qualifications.

That response is not to be belittled in any way. Without it the vast structure of help for the needy that has grown up in our society would topple immediately. Help for the helpless would become a job for the government and a valuable exercise for the human ego would disappear forever. There would be no more Good Samaritans, only good taxpayers, and man would have diminished his stature a little all round.

So the voluntary donors in today's great charity drives should not be admired the less. But what he or she is doing should be understood. It is not necessarily charity in its original sense. Among the greatest supporters of any large campaign are the wealthier citizens who are approached for special donations. But how charitable, in essence, is a tycoon whose secretary makes out and stamps "the usual cheque" and sends it off without him even seeing it. Perhaps the "giver" doesn't even know the amount of the cheque or even that it has been mailed. It is just one of many recurrent expenses which he has long ago placed on an automatic, time-saving basis.

His money is appreciated and vitally necessary. But he himself misses out on the repayment—the feeling of having done something generous for somebody else.

Perhaps there are not so many avenues for charitable impulses as once there were, in the direct sense. Many of today's charitable processes are, in a realm which requires trained workers—the generously inclined layman might do more harm than good.

There are such fields as counselling delinquent juveniles, advising on family problems, straightening out mental or emotional upsets, locating and directing applicants to the proper specialized agency to meet the needs of a particular case.

Once welfare work gets into this area, it becomes difficult to direct well-intentioned amateurs to the best advantage. And the open-handed generosity of an earlier day runs into trouble almost immediately.

Once Removed

In the mere interests of avoiding chaos a city in these times almost has to co-ordinate its giving. This means organization and pooling of resources—and the giver finds himself removed at least one stage from the receiver.

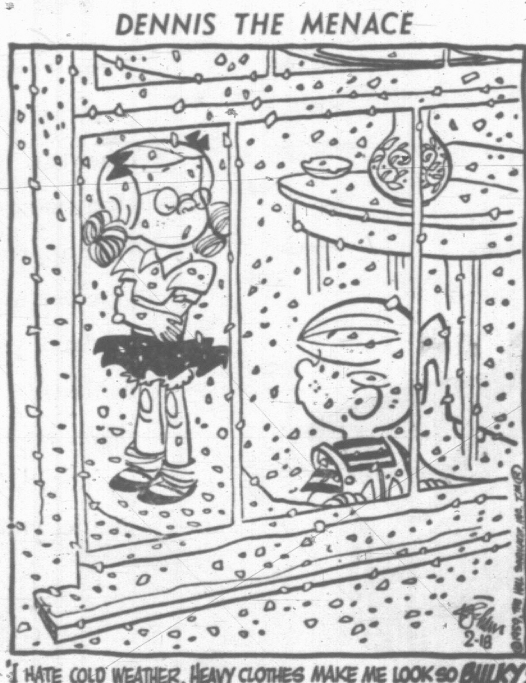

There are, of course, many direct acts of neighborliness to be performed by those who may wish to.

There are blind folk who would be overjoyed to go for a walk with a sighted person, bed-ridden patients who would enjoy some conversation with someone who has a fresh viewpoint, elderly people whose whole week would be enlivened by a single visit or a drive in an automobile.

Charity on this level is much more human than on the level of the pledge card or the bank cheque. For that reason, perhaps, it is more scarce.

Another wide field for true charitable impulse is found in the provision of shelter for the homeless. It is one thing to provide money to operate a home for orphans; it is quite another to open your own home and donate what money cannot buy.

This indeed, is one of the few remaining forms of charity that cannot be more efficiently performed by organization and training. Science has found no substitute for a happy home as a factory for happy people. That is what the Family and Children's Service has in mind this week as it appeals for local couples to open their homes, whether they already have children or not, to drifting youngsters who need what only a home can give. It's a thought.

Less Than a Dozen Men Are Qualified: Who Will Win the U.S. Presidency for His Party?

By BRUCE HUTCHISON

WASHINGTON, D.C. — According to the American Constitution, any respectable citizen of the United States can become its president.

According to the actual constitution of politics, hardly more than a dozen men, in any election years, are qualified for the presidency. All the others, however able and otherwise suitable, are eliminated by a vast, unwritten complex of geographical, racial, economic and religious taboos.

Thus as the presidential election of 1960 already begins, with preliminary manoeuvring behind the scenes, the choice of President Eisenhower's successor narrows down to not more than a dozen, and probably not more than half a dozen men. And among them, as the visitor to Washington soon finds, Governor Nelson Rockefeller, of New York, has suddenly shot up above all others like a rocket in the political stratosphere.

The overnight eminence of this relatively young man is perhaps the most surprising fact of American politics to a stranger who has lived under a very different British system.

Who, after all, is Rockefeller? Only at first sight, the scion of a rich family whose very name, a generation ago, would have been a fatal taboo against any of its members in practical politics.

On second sight, however, Rockefeller appears as one of the key men in the political States and the world by virtue of a political miracle on his part and the misfortunes of his chief rival, Vice-President Nixon.

Until Rockefeller appeared the Republican presidential nomination was firmly in Mr. Nixon's hand, merely by default if for no other reason. Apparently he could be challenged by nobody as Mr. Eisenhower's chosen heir and as the actual manager-in-chief of the Republican party.

But in all his success he carries a heavy, perhaps an impossible burden—he must run on the record of the Eisenhower government, because he is a major part of it. Whatever his own private views may be—and they often seem far different from the official views of the government—he cannot escape the past. He cannot repudiate, or even disengage himself, from the acts of the chief who made him.

Hence the Republican party's real dilemma was to find a new candidate without any attachment to the Eisenhower Government—above all, a man who offered a new face, a new set of ideas, a new hope.

The gods of politics unexpectedly produced such a man last November when Rockefeller, an obscure and apparently hopeless candidate, upset the Harriman regime in New York and defeated the Democratic party locally in the midst of a nationwide Democratic Congressional sweep.

To a Canadian it may seem odd that a man can qualify himself for the White House overnight merely by winning a state governorship, but it is not odd in American politics. It is traditional.

From the Mansion

Every great president of this century leaped into the White House from the mansion of a state governor—Theodore Roosevelt, Woodrow Wilson, Franklin Roosevelt. (Truman, a great president also, arrived in office by the accident of his leader's death.)

On the other hand, the unsuccessful presidents—Taft, Harding and Hoover—had lacked the useful, the almost necessary training of state politics where future presidents are schooled in executive decision and publicly tested before the nation.

But Mr. Rockefeller's best asset is Mr. Nixon's public disability as Mr. Eisenhower's heir and certain private disabilities of temperament.

It is taken almost as axiomatic in Washington, therefore, that Mr. Rockefeller will be nominated, unless he makes a prodigious mess of government in the largest American state.

Of that there is no sign. Mr. Rockefeller has deliberately begun his administration and his drive for the presidency by choosing a temporarily unpopular course of increased taxes to balance the budget and pay for popular social services. If this bold policy succeeds with the New York public and thus proves him to be a strong man, the presidential nomination should be within easy grasp.

Election, however, is a very different thing. For by all the visible signs the Democrats are certain to win the presidency in 1960, as they won the Congress overwhelmingly last November.

These signs are not as reliable as they seem.

The dilemma of the Democratic party—unique in history and ironic in the current situation—is to find an adequate candidate who can focus the party's majority power in the nation.

That power was demonstrated in the Congressional election. The Democratic party is the majority party by a wide margin and, barring an unbelievable accident, can carry the Congress again in the next election.

But it cannot be sure of carrying the presidency on that account, for in the United States, unlike Canada, Congressional and presidential elections are entirely separate.

Thus Mr. Eisenhower could carry the presidency but in the last two elections he could not give his unpopular party control of the Congress. His was a personal victory, as most presidential victories have always been. What the Democrats desperately need now is an assured personal victor.

None is in sight. Only four men are widely considered as Democratic presidential possibilities. All of them have serious handicaps.

Senator John Kennedy, the boy wonder of Massachusetts, is a Catholic and no Catholic has ever been elected president. Besides, he looks too young, immature and precious to many party managers.

Senator Humphrey, of Minnesota, now inaugurating a stop-Kennedy movement in the middle west, is a relatively new national personality and, imprisoned in the drudgery of the Senate, is in a poor position to keep his face and views before the public.

Little Appeal

Senator Symington is a tough, hard-driving executive but has little box-office appeal and has shown no sign of political genius.

Then, in the background, stands Adlai Stevenson, twice beaten by Mr. Eisenhower but, according to the public opinion polls, still the most popular Democrat in the nation.

Conceivably, if the other candidates split the party convention a year from next summer, the party might decide to draft Mr. Stevenson—against all the rules of politics—for a third attempt, as made by only one former candidate,

FROM LONDON

Moscow Visit

WHEN Mr. Macmillan told the House of Commons that he and the Foreign Secretary, Mr. Selwyn Lloyd, were going to Moscow on Feb. 21 for ten days, he was in effect declaring a close season in diplomatic controversy.

Mr. Khrushchev accepted Mr. Macmillan's proposals for a visit and, having done so, can scarcely act too ostentatiously in a way that will frighten Mr. Macmillan off his journey.

Similarly, at home, those politicians who are most anxious for an Anglo-Russian understanding cannot go too far in crabbiness Mr. Macmillan's journey: after all, the Russians may say at the end of it that it was a most helpful visit!

Before Mr. Macmillan announced his journey to the House, but after substantial reports had been published unofficially that the visit was on, a group of Labor Left-wingers, led by Mr. Sydney Silverman, Mr. Zilliacus, Mr. Mikardo, and Mr. Swingle, tabled a motion asking for the de facto recognition of the East German Government, and for the formation, "by agreement between that Republic and the German Federal Republic," of an all-German Federal Council with which a treaty could be negotiated providing for the admission of a united Germany to the United Nations and her exclusion from military alliances, in pursuance of a policy of disengagement.

European Solution

In other circumstances, this motion might cause rather a rumpus in the Labor ranks, but since, theoretically at least, this is one of the solutions to the European problem which Mr. Macmillan and Mr. Selwyn Lloyd might discuss—they are not going to Moscow as negotiators—no dread consequences are likely to flow from the Left-wing motion for the present. ("Theoretically" is the key word: Mr. Macmillan is not likely to weaken Federal Germany's position.)

In the breathing space thus created it may be permissible to guess at Mr. Macmillan's private thoughts as he plans his journey.

His public thoughts, of course, are plain enough; he, like everybody else at Westminster, would like to make it easier for Russia and the West to live together on honorable terms. But is it too far-fetched to suppose that Mr. Macmillan dreams in private of a second Congress of Berlin from which he could come home saying, with more truth than Mr. Neville Chamberlain was able to do on his return from Munich, that for the second time a British Prime Minister had brought back "peace with honor?"

Eminent Figure

Mr. Macmillan's admiration for Sir Winston Churchill is too great ever to let him think of himself as a second Churchill, but why not as a second Salisbury—Macmillan occupying in relation to Churchill the position which Salisbury occupied in relation to Disraeli, who was so eminent a figure in the Congress of 1878?

Mr. Macmillan's announcement of his visit was received by the House as an ordinary item of news. There was none of the emotional upset caused by Chamberlain's invitation to Munich. There are several reasons for last week's detachment.

The news had leaked unofficially in advance. The House had got used to the idea, over a period of many months, that Mr. Macmillan was anxious to try his luck with a personal approach to the Russian leaders whenever the right moment seemed to have arrived.

Some Scepticism

There was some scepticism about Mr. Macmillan's timing: was it dictated solely by diplomatic considerations, or had electoral thoughts contributed to it? And party passion was spending itself in controversy over steel nationalisation.

Last week's program in the House of Commons did not include a debate on foreign affairs—nothing nearer, in fact, than a debate on the Free Trade Area negotiations. Labor has had the disposal of one day's business this week because the supply day period, when the Opposition always chooses the subjects for debate, has begun.

But Labor's choice for Tuesday's debate was national insurance and national assistance. Questions about the Moscow visit must, of course, be expected, and perhaps next week Labor will ask for a debate.

What Is Canada Doing?

NEW YORK—The United Nations has declared a World Refugee Year, an international drive to aid the world's most pathetic citizens.

At a recent meeting in Geneva, support was pledged by 14 nations, including "have not" nations such as Greece and Tunisia. Help was also promised by the Holy See in Rome. Canada, however, was conspicuous by her silence.

The British representative, in contrast, reported that a national committee has been set up under the patronage of the Queen. Backed by a grant of $280,000 from the government, it has set out to raise $5,600,000. The idea for the Refugee Year came, incidentally, from a group of young Englishmen, including Chris Chataway, the great British track star. These men, on a recent trip, were appalled at the plight of refugees and decided to do something.

In the United States another committee is at work and the word at the United Nations is that it will not lack energy or funds. The government of Canada, one of the richest and emptiest lands in the world, is reported to have decided to take no action on the Refugee Year, although it will give its blessing to any private group which wishes to participate. So far no private citizens have roused themselves.

This lack of response is regarded with some surprise at the UN where Canada is recognized as one of the great immigration nations in the world and the nation which took more Hungarian refugees than any other. It's the golden land of opportunity for people all over the world, the "preferred" nation, and people at the UN who work on refugee problems had assumed that Canadians would be refugee conscious.

In some respects, however, this inactivity is not surprising because Canada's reputation in refugee matters is not brilliant. Canada has, of course, taken a large number of refugees but the policy has been to take the cream of the crop and leave the problem cases for other nations, with less money and less opportunity, to cope with.

Some of the European nations have done far more to solve the problem cases, the "heartbreak" cases. The Swedes, in particular, have actually gone out and recruited problem cases and have found that they thereby gain excellent citizens.

In particular they have brought in tuberculosis patients and cured them in TB sanatoria which would otherwise have been empty. The result is that they win for themselves citizens who are deeply grateful and anxious to do everything possible to repay their new country.

By contrast, the Canadian immigration regulations exclude persons suffering from tuberculosis. And the result has often been heartbreak and anguish. Many families have been broken up because one member, sometimes a mother or father, had to remain behind because of 19th century regulations which still govern, a disease no longer regarded as a menace.

It must be recognized, however, that the regulations have recently been bent sufficiently to permit families to be reunited but the information here is that there is no move on the part of Canada to follow the example of the European countries and try to beat the problem.

This is especially regretted because refugee experts say that one big push is all that is needed to end the refugee blight in Europe. Contrary to widespread opinion, the problem there is far from hopeless and is, in fact, well on the way to solution.

In the past four years over 600,000 refugees have been placed and today only 40,000 remain in camps. And, of these, homes are in sight for almost three-quarters. Out of 600,000, only 12,900 remain today as problem cases.

The success of the European refugee campaign is, in fact, one of the rare bright spots in a rather gloomy world.

The problem elsewhere is tougher—a million refugees in the Middle East, 700,000 in Hong Kong, more in North Africa, others in Shanghai, and for most of them there is virtually no hope in sight except continued life in camps. But the problem must be met.

It's noted that Canada voted in the last General Assembly in favor of the World Refugee Year and is thus committed to "encourage additional financial contributions" and to "encourage additional opportunities for permanent refugee solutions."

So far Canada has encouraged nothing.

LONDON LETTER

By WALLACE REYBURN

Room at the Top

LONDON—One goes to films and comes away feeling that this movie was "not bad," that one was "terrible," another was "quite good." They provide a diversion, a chance to see people doing a bit of play-acting on the screen.

And then along comes a film which is not just that. It stops you in your tracks. You come out moved, perhaps shaken, by it. It has hit right home and you can't think of it with the detachment of watching play-acting.

And at once you must tell everybody about it, feeding your ego a little in the process because you've seen ahead of them a movie that is shortly going to be the most talked about thing in town.

Such a film is "Room at the Top." The press has gone overboard for it. It's up for a long list of awards. And it will certainly be the biggest hit since "River Kwai."

Having just seen it, I can confirm that there are several unusual angles about it. The most important of these is that it is "grown-up."

It has an X certificate (adults only) and earns it legitimately, i.e., not because it has some saucy sex in it but because it's about how adults behave and talk on occasion, and it's best not to have the kids around.

For those of you who haven't read the best-selling book "Room at the Top" (the film's much better than the book, incidentally), the story is about a young man working in the town clerk's office of a dreary Yorkshire town.

No background, but he has ambition. Not only is he going to get himself up among the people who have all the "brass" and control the town, but also he's going to win the best-looking, most sought-after girl for his wife... and he doesn't care whose corns he treads on getting what he wants.

Laurence Harvey (mark the name, he's going to be very big in a year or so) plays this heel you can't help having a soft spot for, you feel so sorry for how he's humiliated. Heather Sears (remember her as the deaf-and-dumb girl in "Esther Costello?"), is the young small-town society girl who loves him because of the strangely likeable quality he has. And Simone Signoret is the local ageing femme fatale who commits suicide over him.

The dialogue—if it gets to Canada intact—will make you sit up in your seat. Not so much because of the words used, which are eyebrow-raising enough, but because they talk about things which you've never heard discussed before on the screen.

The feeling of "actuality" is wonderfully done. It was filmed in dismal Bradford, Yorks.

The direction—by Jack Clayton, who has never made a feature film in his life before—is superb. Example: the scene after Harvey has seduced Sears and they walk back through the woods. It is a long-shot and you can hear their voices but can't make out what they're saying. You don't need to. You know exactly what's being said.

This trick of direction will be copied. So will "Room at the Top" as a whole. It's a new type of truly grown-up film which could quickly woo people away from TV juvenility.

Indians to Get Liquor Rights

REGINA (CP)—A new act, designed to relax Saskatchewan's liquor laws, was given first reading in the legislature Tuesday.

The bill would establish five new types of liquor outlets, subject to a local option vote, for both men and women.

Men's beer parlors, the only drinking establishments in the province since 1934, would continue to operate. But no beer parlor licences would be issued to hotels not already licensed at the beginning of this year, unless special circumstances existed.

Provincial Treasurer C. M. Fines, who introduced the act, said later he hopes it will go into effect April 1. Some of the new outlets could be in operation before the end of the year.

The new outlets would be restaurants, beverage rooms, dining rooms, cocktail rooms, and clubs. In addition, restaurant, beverage room, dining room and cocktail room licences could be issued to railway companies for transcontinental trains passing through Saskatchewan.

In all the new outlets, sale of liquor would be in conjunction with sale of food. Certain standards in facilities would have to be met.

The Liquor Licensing Act, 54 pages long, called for sale of liquor to Indians, subject to the federal Indian Act and the issue of a proclamation by the governor-general-in-council. It recommended that Indians be sold liquor on the same basis as anyone else.

Time Now to Dig Up Dormant Vegetables

In Victoria it is a common sight to see the remains of the winter root vegetables still in the kitchen garden during February.

Some people leave them there while using the odd one or two until they need the space again in early April. It is a fact that leeks, parsnips and carrots will withstand a certain amount of frost. Apart from the inconvenience of digging the roots from wet, muddy soil in cool weather there are many advantages in having a supply of these vegetables on hand all winter. And it saves dollars.

Now that mid-February has come and gone, plants which have been dormant since November will begin to make new roots and new top growth.

Root vegetables are no exception. By the end of this month new growth will be apparent, and the roots will be unfit for eating. We are told that many chemical changes occur in plants as growth begins, and some of the chemicals formed can be harmful to humans if taken in sufficient quantities.

To avoid loss of the vegetables in your garden, the leeks, parsnips and carrots should be dug at once. Cut the tops roughly from the last two and discard. Remove part of the leek greens if you wish.

Place the heap of vegetables, mixed if you like, on the ground against a wall, fence or building and heap wet soil over them.

Since some of this soil must be removed each time you go for vegetables, keep it to a depth of about one foot.

It will be a messy job getting them out, but a pail of lukewarm water near at hand to wash them outdoors before taking into the house will be appreciated by all concerned.

Wash the used garden tools in the water, too, drying off with an oily rag afterwards to prevent rusting.

This idea will save a month's supply of root vegetables, and in that time you may have a few tender salad makings ready in the cold frame.

—new treatment idea!

Ever tried gargling to ease a cough? It is one of those ideas that make you ask "Why didn't somebody think of this before?" Well, they did, but the idea of gargling with Pinex has suddenly become more noticeable. Why not? The soothing properties of Pinex go to work right away. Just keep Pinex in your throat as long as possible. The best way is to gargle then swallow. This way, Pinex is more effective in easing coughs. Try it.

CNR CHIEF WARNS OF INFLATION

'Discipline or Chaos'

VANCOUVER (CP)—The times cry out for fiscal self-discipline and a monetary policy that protects the value of the Canadian dollar, Donald Gordon, chairman and president of the Canadian National Railways, said here Tuesday night.

The alternative is chaos in national affairs, he told, the annual meeting of the Greater Vancouver Metropolitan Industrial Development Commission.

"Danger signals are flying to warn that inflation could gather momentum and pose a grave threat to our system of private competitive enterprise."

Products must be sold in a strongly competitive export market, he said.

"I am sure you will agree when I say the times cry out for support of fiscal self-discipline and a monetary policy that protects the value of the Canadian dollar, since inflation continues to be one of the greatest long-term dangers to the welfare of this and other democratic nations."

Mr. Gordon said he agreed with a statement by Victoria Times publisher, Stuart Keate, that the public recognizes "an entity bigger than management or labor—and that is the nation itself—Canada."

"I for one welcome the existence of labor unions in this country," Mr. Gordon said.

Exploited Tourists Don't Return—Bruch

Herbert Bruch, MLA for Esquimalt, warned in the legislature Tuesday of "unscrupulous autocourt operators who are driving tourists away from this province."

He said some operators charge double the usual rate when they know accommodation is scarce and, when tourists find they have been exploited, they do not return. Mr. Bruch urged the grading of restaurants according to what they have to offer.

"Sometimes you are enticed into a restaurant by its bright appearance and then when you get inside you are offered one of those greasy-spoon meals."

Winter Works Program Under Renewed Fire

(From Times News Services)

OTTAWA — The government is having trouble getting its supplementary spending estimates through the House.

Of the handful of items for additional expenditures totaling $27,954,000 in the current fiscal year, three have produced fairly extended debate. The House wound up the third of these Tuesday by approving spending of $15,000,000 as the federal half of labor costs on municipal winter works projects.

This item was the largest single one among the final supplementaries for the year ending March 31, but others of $1,300,000 to complete $1-acre payments to Prairie grain growers and $2,193,500 to pay the anticipated operating deficit of the CBC touched off equally sharp fights before winning approval last week.

The winter works program first came under fire last Friday when opposition members attacked it as too little, too late. After a one-day interruption they resumed the battle on similar ground Tuesday. They then went on to criticize as inadequate the government's coal subvention policy for which they were asked to vote an additional $630,000 for the current fiscal year.

The winter works debate resulted in considerable variation among five members in their estimates of the percentage the federal payments made up of the total works project costs.

Labor Minister Starr said 38 per cent of total project costs are labor costs on the basis of figures supplied by the municipalities.

However, Liberal Alexis Caron, former mayor of Hull, Que., put it down to 12 or 13 per cent, hardly enough to cover the increased cost of doing the work in winter.

Murdo Martin (CCF, Timmins) argued labor costs represented as little as 3 per cent of the streets, sidewalks, waterworks and sewer projects. Romuald Bourque (Liberal, Montreal Outremont-St. Jean), mayor of Outremont, Que., supplied the figure 20 per cent.

'Drop in Bucket' Liberal Claims

He said the $15,000,000 was a "drop in the bucket" that would provide about 2½ days of work for each of the 538,000 persons unemployed at mid-January.

Frank Howard (CCF, Skeena) said the program was designed to make a big publicity splash but when the "gimmicks and loopholes" had been examined after the publicity the federal government was not being as generous as it made out.

He suggested the figure 13 per cent as the portion of total costs of the works projects represented by payroll expenditures.

Opposition Leader Pearson Tuesday accused the government of engineering a squeeze play to prevent proper discussion of a Liberal proposal for a new national flag.

He made the charge after three Progressive Conservatives had spoken in rambling fashion for nearly a full hour on a couple of divorce bills.

Mr. Pearson intervened just as it appeared the divorce bills would come to a vote—a few minutes before the close of an hour-long period provided for debate on them and on private members' bills.

He pointed out that if the divorce bills came to a vote it would leave only about three minutes for debate on a bill by Samuel Boulanger (L-Drummond-Athabaska) that would require the government to prepare a design for a new national flag this session.

The government is making "every effort" to preserve "reasonable conditions" for Canadian Pacific Airlines' service to Australia, External

ANTI-MOONLIGHTING LAW IMPOSSIBLE—WICKS

If moonlighting is to be curbed, it is up to the public to do it, Labor Minister Lyle Wicks said in the legislature Tuesday.

Men or women who hold two jobs are not working in the interests of their fellow men, "but it would be an administrative monstrosity to legislate moonlighting out of existence."

TO ARBITRATE HOSPITAL CONTRACTS

Impartial Tribunal Asked

A brief presented to the provincial Cabinet Tuesday by Registered Nurses' Association of B.C. asked for an impartial tribunal to arbitrate contracts in B.C. hospitals. Meanwhile 800 nurses in Greater Vancouver area were ballotting in a government supervised strike vote. The nurses had asked a $20 monthly increase but negotiations broke down last month. Basic wage is now $260 a month. Hospital officials said they avored the award but could get no assurance the increased expenditure would be met by B.C. Hospital Insurance Service.

The office of Canadian high commissioner in London, England, was created in 1980.

By ERNIE FEDORUK

Laurie Carroll's fun-lovin' pals have affectionately dubbed the Oak Bay pro as "the 18th Green Kid."

The defending Times' Island Open champ has reeled off two fancy five-stroke lead over the balance of the field. In the opening round at 'Uplands' last month, he started down the 18th fairway with a 65. A bogey would have given him a par-matching round but he didn't stop until he was two over.

On Sunday, playing his "backyard," Laurie needed a bogey to match the regulation figures. The triple bogey gave him a 71.

Best chances of overtaking Laurie belong to Colwood's Vince Clarkson (five strokes behind), John Merriman of Gorge Vale or Al Reside of Uplands. Reside, first-round leader with a 70, slipped 10 strokes off the pace Sunday.

Final round will be played at Colwood on March 8. Incidentally, four players tied for low net honors Sunday. They were Clarkson (75-70), Joe Briggs, of Gorge Vale (75-70), Harold Husband, of Victoria Club (79-70) and Vince Wheatley (79-70). Cedar Hill junior, Dick Munn, was runner-up in the low gross chase with a commendable 74.

Button battles take over again next weekend with Gorge Vale's Donaldson brothers, Art and Harry, challenging clubmates Ron Cuth and Al MacLeod.

Another brother act will be the defending combination in the junior button matches with Uplands' Noel and Dale Dalziel meeting Munn and Kerry Greenwood.

They'll all play at Uplands.

SHORT CHIPS: District players who give up the game during the winter season will notice plenty of changes on at least three of the local courses. . . foundation for Uplands' new caddy-cart shop has been laid down while Gorge Vale is expanding parking facilities. . . at Colwood, the new water reservoir along the fourth is expected to cut down the club's water bill considerably. . . in the Oak Bay locker rooms, Jasper Park Lodge pro Ron MacLeod was saying, "George Bigelow is 'the toughest man' he's ever met when it comes down to 'giving or taking' strokes. . . you can't blame George. . . MacLeod turned in a 64 two weeks ago and a 69 last week. . . Uplands' Johnny Wren is 'up and around' after his recent illness and should be back in the pro shop some time next month."

School Curling Expansion-Eyed

CALGARY (CP) — The Canadian high school curling championship soon may be expanded to a 12-team tournament to include the northern territories.

Ted Brooks of Calgary, chairman of this year's 11-team final which started at the Stampede Corral Monday, said a tremendous interest in curling has developed in such centres as Fort St. John, B.C., and Yellowknife, N.W.T.

Some northern centres now are included in the Alberta zone playoffs and it was possible the territories would send their own representatives to next year's finals in Noranda, Que.

Heart-Breakers Hurt Hansen's High Hopes

By ERNIE FEDORUK

Irene Frazer's Vancouver Pacific Club rink took on the role of "giant-killers" Tuesday and old memories came back to haunt Ina Hansen.

Mrs. Hansen, the Kootenay zone's representative in the B.C. ladies' curling championships, felt like the proverbial left-behind bridesmaid Tuesday evening. Unbeaten going into Tuesday's play, Mrs. Hansen lost two heart-tugging battles, to all but drop out of contention in the race for the coveted Eaton's Trophy.

There's still hope, mind you, but even Ina admitted those two losses Tuesday at the Victoria Curling Club cost her a chance, at the championship and a trip to the western Canada finals at Brandon March 9-12.

"Well, there's always next year," It's an old refrain, but an all-too-familiar one for the Kimberley skip. This year's rock-tossing contests at the Quadra-Street ice palace mark the fifth straight time Mrs. Hansen has carried the Kootenay banner into the B.C. play-downs.

She missed the title last year, losing to Vancouver's Lois Haddon in a sudden-death playoff. Unless there are some surprising reversals on the remaining draws, it is unlikely she'll get any closer to the title than she was heading into Tuesday's rounds.

Curling with Ada Colles, Isabel Leith and Mae Shaw, Mrs. Hansen suffered her first loss at the hands of Kelowna's Thelma Owen.

THOUGH BREAK

It wasn't easy to take. Two up coming home, she watched Mrs. Owen make good use of last rock to count three on the 10th end and squeeze out a 9-8 victory. The second setback, 12-8 at the hands of the Frazer foursome, was another that tugged at one's heart. Trailing by two (8-10) on the last end, Mrs. Hansen went down to throw her last rock with a good chance of counting three.

John Hilson, partner in a New York investment firm and a former major stockholder in the Browns.

Veeck said that the tentative date to complete the deal has been set as March 31.

Well, Then, Let's Try That Slow Start Again

Cats' Quick Start Fails As Stamps Post 6-4 Win

Calgary 6, Victoria 4

By DOUG PEDEN

The "Comeback Kids" of the Western Hockey League are in danger of acquiring a new, less-flattering nickname.

Only a few short weeks ago, Victoria Cougars were building themselves quite a reputation around the loop's Coast Division as a "come-from-behind" gang that could laugh at a slow start and pull out a victory with a spectacular closing drive.

They hit the high point at New Westminster Jan. 10, when they spotted the Royals a 5-1 handicap and hustled down the home stretch to knock off the Royals, 6-5, in overtime.

Times have changed, and in their last three games the Cats have discovered they can't stand early prosperity. In each of the three, they have helped themselves to three goals in the opening period and then blown the decision.

They grabbed a 3-1 lead at Seattle last Thursday and eventually dropped a 7-5 decision. At Memorial Arena Saturday, they had the division-leading Totems on the ropes after blasting out a 3-0 advantage in the opening 20 minutes. They lost that one in overtime, by a 5-4 count.

Cougars tried the quick-start system before 2,165 fans at Memorial Arena Tuesday night, giving up one tally to the high-flying Calgary Stampers and then exploding out in front with three goals in less than three minutes.

They should have waited. The faster Stamps made it 3-3 before the first period ended and kept hammering away to forge ahead, 5-4, in the middle session. Wayne Hicks scuttled Victoria's last hopes with another Calgary goal with less than four minutes remaining and made the final count read 6-4 for the Stamps.

Pistol Pots 30th Goal of Year

Also scoring for Calgary were Rino Robazza, Billy Hay, Dusty Blair and Eddie Dorohoy.

Cougar marksmen were defenceman Carl Kaiser, Al Nicholson, Gordie Wilson and rookie Don Blackburn.

Dorohoy's tally, which turned out to be the winning goal, was his 30th of the season and it boosted his league-leading scoring total to 91 points, six ahead of Seattle's Guyle Fielder.

Speed and more determined checking may have made the difference for the goal-hungry Cowboys, but they were helped by indecision of Cougars trying to pass the puck out of the Victoria zone.

Forced into errors by Calgary checking pressure, the Cats lost possession in their own zone on several occasions and three times the alert Stamps gleefully turned the breaks into goals.

Cougars, who are in a bit of a scoring rut with a harvest of four goals in seven of their eight February games, again gave a good account of themselves on attack. All their goals were well executed and it took some sharp netminding by Roy Edwards to blank the Cats over the final 37 minutes.

Edwards, leading league goaltenders with a skimpy 2.68 goals-against average, finished up with a total of 24 saves. Marcel Pelletier, who had two shots trickle between his leg pads, had a busier evening in the Victoria goal during the fast-moving tussle and turned aside 38 drives.

Holding a 10-point lead over the fifth-place Royals, the Cougars are in New Westminster tonight and return to Memorial Arena Saturday night to take on Vancouver Canucks.

Forward Stan Baluk, who had scored 22 goals before being sidelined with an ankle fracture Jan. 14, may return to action against the Canucks.

'ROCKET' FINISHED FOR SEASON?

MONTREAL (UPI) — Further examination revealed today that Maurice (Rocket) Richard's broken leg has not healed as well as expected and the Montreal Canadiens' star is expected to be finished for the remainder of the regular National Hockey League season.

The 37-year-old scoring champion disclosed Tuesday that a re-examination of his injury showed that the damage was "more extensive than first appeared in early X-rays."

In other player news on the western front Wings sent right-winger Bill McNeill to Edmonton.

At the same time, the National Hockey League club recalled Cummy Burton, 22-year-old right winger from Seattle Totems.

Burton, who has been on loan to Seattle, will join Red Wings in Montreal Thursday.

Lakehead Quartet Earns Brier Berth

NORTH BAY, Ont. (CP) — Darwin Wark skipped his Fort William foursome into the Canadian curling championships Tuesday night with a 13-6 victory over Les Redford, of McIntyre.

It was the fourth straight win and a complete sweep of the two-day competition for the Lakehead crew, which will represent Northern Ontario in the Dominion finals at Quebec City, March 2 to 6.

The Edmonton club, in second place in the Prairie Division of the Western Hockey League, is on a five-game losing streak and has scored only one goal in the last three games.

BRUIN BOSS IN TOWN

Lynn's Presence Didn't Aid Cause

Four members of the Victoria hockey club are operating under the discerning eye of the big boss this week. Lynn Patrick, general manager of the National Hockey League's Boston Bruins, is on his annual "look-see" visit to the Western Hockey League while the Bruins are forced out of Boston Gardens by an ice show.

The former Victorian, whose club owns the contracts of Al Nicholson, Gordie Haworth, Stan Baluk and Don Blackburn, sat in on the Cougars' battle with Calgary at Memorial Arena Tuesday night.

Staying with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Lester Patrick, Lynn will also watch the Cougars at New Westminster tonight and against Vancouver here Saturday. He will view three other WHL games on his return trip to Boston.

Blackburn and Nicholson each scored a goal Tuesday night, but the Cougars lost a 6-4 verdict.

Said the Boston GM, "No comment."

It's nice to be a hero, as Danny Belisle of Vancouver found out following Canucks' 5-4 overtime win against Seattle Totems Tuesday night.

Just as the teams were ready to settle for a deadlock, Belisle grabbed a loose puck in the Seattle zone and beat netminder Bev Bentley to give Canucks a timely Western Hockey League victory over the Coast Division leaders.

It was the rookie's second of the night and came at 9:21 in the overtime period. Canucks came from behind a 4-0 lead Seattle enjoyed after the first period.

THEIR HERO!

Fans stormed the ice and Belisle was carried to the dressing room.

Scoring the other Vancouver goals were Kent Douglas, Ron Hutchinson and Les Lilley. For Seattle, Rudy Filion, Val Fonteyne, Guyle Fielder and Bill MacFarland scored once each.

Ray Mikulan stopped 19 for the winners, and Bev Bentley 30 for Totems.

Totems led 4-0 after 20 minutes, Canucks scored twice each in the second and third periods to tie the game.

Lack of Opposition Irks Belleville Boss

MALMO, Sweden (CP) — Canada's pre-world hockey warmup in Europe so far has been little more than a fancy-skating drill, and much to assistant manager Billy Reay's dismay there probably won't be any real opposition until the world tournament itself is well under way.

After scoring almost 100 goals in seven games against the Swedes, the Canadians journey today to Helsinki for an exhibition with the Finns. Later, they travel to West Germany, Italy and Switzerland for six exhibitions—two in each country.

The world tournament preliminaries will be in Czechoslovakia, where Canada's representative from Belleville will play three games to qualify for the final elimination round.

WHIP SWEDES 20-2

Tuesday night Reay expressed disappointment at the lack of competition lined up for the Canadians after his players slaughtered another Swedish combination, 20-2.

The game developed into such a scoring farce after two periods that Reay loaned three of his forwards to the Swedes in the third period. Facing their own, the Canadians were limited to three goals in the finale.

Reay's own team, led by leading scorer with 12 goals in 10 exhibition games, had four goals Tuesday night. Floyd Crawford, Lou Smirke and Pete Conacher three each.

OUTDOOR REPORT BY Doug Peden

The great power battle among the major manufacturers of outboard motors is over, for one year at least, and the 1959 lines of portable power plants now being displayed by Victoria dealers indicate the generals of outboard boating are digging in to consolidate their positions.

There is still considerable emphasis on power, but none of the "big four" of the outboard industry has stepped up the number of horses harnessed under motor cowlings of its biggest models. Improved performance, greater economy of operation, reduced noise and, in some cases, reduced prices are features being counted on to hypnotize prospective buyers.

Engineers and designers have accomplished wonders with the once noisy and finicky power packages over the past half-dozen years. It seemed too much to expect that they could continue to come up with improvements without adding weight or increasing prices.

But they have done just that, and their products are more dependable, quieter and better looking than ever. It looks like another record year for the outboard people.

All the 1959 lines are improved and you can hardly go wrong with any of the nationally-known brands. But unless we miss our guess, this is the year that the Scott (formerly Scott-Atwater) chews some big hunk of business away from its major competitors. The new Scott has several features which could prove tempting lures and prices have been reduced on its electric start models and the tiny 3.6 hp job.

Color Scheme to Please the Gals

Possibly with a thought for the ladies, the Scott people are offering their fiberglass motor hoods in six colors, which should appeal to the boating beauties who think a motor should work in with the color scheme on the family craft.

The Scott line includes eight models, from the 3.6 midget to the big Flying Scott 60-hp model. The new models have rubber mounts to reduce noise and vibration, plus a new muffling system. A 50% reduction is claimed for the 40-hp job.

Also on the Scott is a totally-new cooling system with thermostatic control and a "ball-a-matic" attachment which will remove up to 300 gallons of water per hour from the bilge.

Scott also offers a single-lever remote control for starting and shifting with big models. Design on the big 60 has made it possible to economize on both weight and size and it includes an interesting carburetor system—one carburetor for each of the three cylinders. At low speeds, each cylinder operates on its own carburetor, but at full throttle a special manifold enables each cylinder to pull gas from all three.

Electric starting and generators are standard equipment on the 25, 40 and 60-hp Scott models. Available with the automotive-type electric system is a panel with two signal lights, which indicate water temperature in the cooling system and charging rate of the generator.

Johnson engineers may have done the best job of reducing noise. They claim they have muffled sound to an "irreducible minimum" and trimmed vibration even on their bigger power plants. The '59 Johnsons, using fiberglass cowlings, are now completely sealed, except for the intake.

This year Johnson has introduced a thermostatically-controlled cooling system on all models from 5½-hp up, which should result in important economy in fuel consumption, more efficient lubrication and longer engine and spark plug life.

Introduced this year is a new electric starter, which not only delivers more power but actually draws less juice from the battery. It is designed for the Johnson 35 and the big V-type, four-cylinder, 50-hp model, which made an impressive appearance last year.

Propellers Selected to Suit Boats

Evinrude, like Johnson, a division of Outboard Marine, has re-engineered its entire line and has also swung to fiberglass hoods and greatly reduced vibration and noise through the use of rubber and silencing devices.

It has the important thermostatic cooling system, which pushes water around the power unit at a uniform 140 degrees, thus insuring peak performance from trolling to fast cruising speeds.

Evinrude's husky V-4 "fifties" have a new three-blade prop for added efficiency and, like the 35-hp models, are available with either electric or rope starting.

Mercury, probably the most popular power plant among the high-speed boys, has brought out a 15 and 35, which gives it just about the most complete line on the market—nine models, ranging from six-hp to the tall, gleaming, six-cylinder, 70-hp power plant.

Like its main competitors, Mercury has made big strides in noise reduction and has introduced a fuel linkage system in the four and six-cylinder motors that is expected to hit the spot with the average outboarder. The engineers claim the system will result in fuel savings up to 60% while the motor is operating at fishing and moderate cruising speeds.

One Mercury feature that promises to have some appeal is that of suiting a propeller to both boat and motor. New motors from 35-hp up will be shipped without propellers to dealers, who will install the propeller believed best suited to the boat on which the motor will be mounted. The bigger models will also offer electric starting, built-in generators and single-lever remote controls.

Most other brands, some of which are turned out under different names by the "big four," will also have many of the new features and all are expected to be more dependable than ever before.

It looks like a pleasant summer season for the outboarders.

Bathgate Holds Lead After Assist Appears

MONTREAL (CP) — The supposed three-way tie for the National Hockey League's scoring leadership vanished Tuesday with appearance of the league's official statistics. Andy Bathgate of New York Rangers is still top man.

Bathgate officially has 65 points. Bernie Geoffrion of Montreal Canadiens and Edie Litzemberger of Chicago Black Hawks have 64 each. This official unhooking of a tied triumvirate will come as a surprise to newspapermen—to say nothing of the Boomer and Big Litz. There's a single assist involved.

REPORTS CONFLICT

When Boston Bruins played in New York last Wednesday, the announcement on a goal scored by New York's Red Sullivan gave assists to Camille Henry and Bill Gadsby. It was so carried on press circuits and in New York newspapers.

But it turns out that the official scorer's sheet, received at NHL headquarters, showed Bathgate, not Gadsby, as the man assisting with Henry.

The assist was the only point picked up by Bathgate in New York's three games—all losses—last week. He now has 20 goals and 36 assists.

The leading scorers:

Bathgate, New York	20	36	56

Totems Rate In Pre-Meet Tabulations

VANCOUVER — The B.C. high school invitational basketball tournament is shaping up as the biggest in its 14-year history.

A record 85 teams have already entered, battling for 16 playoff berths. The tournament itself runs March 11-14 at the University of British Columbia gymnasium.

The teams in the finals will be the best from six zones in the province.

Pre-tournament play indicates the following teams as strong contenders for playoffs:

Vancouver and District — Vancouver College, King Edward, Lester Pearson, Gladstone; Vancouver Island — Victoria High Totems, Courtenay, Chemainus; Fraser Valley, Abbotsford and North Surrey; Howe Sound — West Vancouver; Okanagan — Penticton, Salmon Arm; Kootenays — Trail and Kimberley.

Ladies' 'Spiel Attracts Seattle Regulars Again

Peg McRae hasn't let the Victoria Ladies' Bouspiel committee down yet.

Mrs. McRae, a 'spiel regular, will again supply the "international flavor" to this year's rockfest that starts at the Victoria Curling Club, Friday.

The McRae rink is one of two from Seattle and one of a record 40 entered in the annual three-day affair. Additional entries hail from Vancouver, Chilliwack, Nanaimo, Duncan, Victoria and Edmonton.

24 FROM HOME
The host club, with 24 entries, boasts the largest representation while Mrs. Chris Leander's quartet from Edmonton will have the distinction of being the "longest travellers".

Accompanying Mrs. McRae on the boat from Seattle will be Mrs. Dorothy Stephens' rink.

Two rinks taking part in the British Columbia playdowns at the Quadra Street sheet—Joy McLellan and Irene Frazer—are among the seven Vancouver quartets entered.

The draw, under the direction of Morely MacDonald, will be made tonight.

DUNCAN RINK REACHES POLICE CURLING FINAL

Sportsmen Seeking Cougar Bounty Return

Membership in the Victoria Fish and Game Protective Association is on the upswing, but club officials have set their sights on a record target.

They hope to raise the membership from its present 480 to a total of 1,000 this year.

Meeting at their Goldstream clubhouse this week, VFGPA members drafted recommendations which will be presented for approval to the March meeting of Island affiliated game clubs.

Resolutions approved by the Island body will, in turn, be presented at the annual meeting of British Columbia sportsmen's club.

It was decided to request a return of the cougar bounty since members believed that cougar hunting should be encouraged in the interests of deer conservation.

FEE INCREASE

The meeting also recommended that trophy fees for non-Canadian hunters be increased by 100 per cent in order to ease the increasing shooting pressure imposed by visiting hunters.

Members also voiced a concern over an apparent annual reduction in appropriations to the fish and game branch and discussed at length methods which might ensure more accurate annual assessment of the numbers of game animals and birds taken by hunters. It was felt that more accurate returns would assist game biologists in their work.

Newly-appointed members of the VFGPA executive are:

Chiang Clears Graft From Formosa Regime

By LIN YUTANG
Written for NEA Service

NEW YORK — Nothing can be written about Formosa without touching the subject of corruption because of ancient associations.

The first clear fact is that names that have been associated with rumored corruptions have been completely weeded out of the government.

The second is that, in the army, which suffered most from it during the exhausting eight years of the Japanese war, graft by padding pay. Lin Yutang rolls is now impossible. The new paymaster system enables the soldier to get his pay direct and not from his commander. On the lower level of local governments and police, my guess is that there is corruption—as in any other country—but such dishonesty is neither rampant nor notorious as in many Southeast Asia countries.

I discussed this subject with Vice-President Chen Cheng and he pointed to his roster of cabinet ministers, whose names for integrity are matters of public knowledge. The advantage of a small country like Formosa is that if there is any irregularity, it soon gets found out.

Fully Alert at 72

I saw President Chiang Kai-shek for over half an hour. At 72, he is in perfect health, owing perhaps to his austere and regular personal habits. On his face was written, remarkable ease, poise and self-confidence. He pronounced de Gaulle in the correct French way, and not by the Chinese transcription of Tai Gao-lo.

His mind was fully alert and gave me the feeling of a man who knew what he was doing, what mistakes he had made in the past, and what was coming next. He was unusually fond of the words "appraisal" and "judgment" and although people might disagree with him, he was sure he was right.

He knew that the Quemoy war would peter out. He knew this probing action, hatched by Khrushchev and Mao in Peiping, was for driving American influence out of the western Pacific, and he knew that the U.S. could not thus just be run out at the point of a gun. These were his "appraisals."

His Own Appointees

This astute, shrewd man and last-ditch fighter still dominates the government, especially in a constitution with strong presidential powers. All high posts are the personal appointees of the president.

The change came when he accepted the constitutional limitations of his powers. It is no longer true that Chiang Kai-shek could write a note and ask the bank to deliver half a million dollars to a certain person.

Expenditures of the president's office are submitted to the government auditing department and have been at times rejected.

Locals Take Over

Another significant thing is that the wealth of the island has passed into the hands of the local inhabitants, contrary to the law of what usually happens to Chinese in overseas areas.

By their thrift and industry, the Chinese overseas have always risen to the top in commerce and industry in Thailand, the Philippines, Malaya and Indonesia.

This puzzled me until I remembered the difference, namely, that here in Formosa, the late Chinese comers are competing with the early comers who are themselves Chinese.

Chinese as Ever

The earlier immigrants control and run the local governments and are also running the local banks and wholesale industry. I talked with many of these local Chinese, some of whom I knew in Amoy on the mainland. Their connection with mainland China has never been interrupted even under the Japanese rule.

There is some friction between the local Chinese and the new immigrants, even as, during the Japanese War, there was friction between the Szechuense around Chungking and the people from "down the river," somewhat as a Vermont would resent a "furriner."

I am convinced that all that Formosa has been able to do in the short space of nine years, other Asiatic countries should be able to do, without paying the price of a totalitarian enslavement of the people or turning a whole country into barracks.

What is required is that there should be honest government devoted to democratic ideals and that the public employees should bend their heart and soul to the job in hand. Formosa is doing it now.

Is there something you want to know? Do you want to win a set of valuable books or other instructive prizes? Then ask Andy. Andy will answer questions submitted by child readers and those who submit the questions he selects to answer will receive worthwhile prizes. The youngster who asks the first question answered each day receives a 15-volume set of Compton's Pictured Encyclopedia (Canadian edition) and of the second question a Hammond Atlas or Globe. Address your questions to "Ask Andy," Victoria Daily Times.

Andy sends a complete, 15-volume set of Compton's Pictured Encyclopedia to Jacqueline Thurston, aged 15, Victoria, B.C., for her question:

Are diatoms made of atoms?

Everything is made of atoms, everything living and everything non-living. All plants and animals, all solids, liquids and gases are made of atoms. Even the invisible air is made of atoms. The moon, the sun and the stars are made of atoms and there are a few atoms and atomic particles scattered throughout the vastness of so-called empty space.

Diatoms are the smallest of water plants. A few types are just big enough for our eyes to see. The smallest measure about 1,000 to an inch. Several thousand average-sized diatoms can crowd onto the head of a pin.

JACQUELINE THURSTON budding physicist

Millions to One

Yet it takes many millions of atoms to make even the smallest diatom. Each living diatom is a one-celled plant. The cell is filled with jelly-like protoplasm. This is the magic stuff which fills the cells of all living plants and animals. Nothing can live without it, for the chemicals within protoplasm hold the secret of life itself. Around its soft cell, the little diatom builds a tiny house harder than granite. This shell is in two equal parts joined with a belt around the waist.

The atoms from which the diatom is made are taken from the water. Plain water, of course, is composed of atoms of hydrogen and oxygen. But the waters of the rivers, lakes and seas are far more than plain, pure water. All sorts of chemicals are dissolved in them. These chemicals are made of atoms, some of which are used to build diatoms.

The magic protoplasm which fills the living cell contains atoms of carbon, hydrogen, oxygen, nitrogen, phosphorus and certain other chemicals. Certain of the atoms within the protoplasm combine to form molecules. Some of these molecules contain perhaps 2,000 atoms. We do not yet understand these complex molecules. But certain chemicals within protoplasm make it possible for a cell to live, grow, and multiply. And protoplasm gives the orders about how these things shall be done.

Hardest of Stone

The shell of the diatom is made of atoms of silica. This is the chemical from which hard, gritty sand is made. Quartz, too, is made mostly of silica and it is the hardest of the common stones. Small as it is, the diatom does not build its shell carelessly. Over 10,000 different diatoms are known, each more beautiful than the next.

The diatom usually multiplies by dividing in two around the waist. Each new diatom then gets busy and grows a new half shell. Some diatoms multiply by spores. One of these fellows can produce millions of new diatoms in a few days. All of them will gather the atoms they need from the waters in which they live. They will follow orders from the protoplasm and build these atoms into new diatoms.

Andy sends a Hammond's International World Globe to Willie Robinson, age 13, Burnsville, N.C., for his question:

Where are gazelles found?

The graceful gazelles are creatures of the Old World. They are small, dainty antelopes, all members of the deer clan. Male gazelles and most females wear elegant horns which are twisted like rope. Most of these dainty little deer are between two and three feet high at shoulder level. Yet

'Ask Andy' Winner Likes Her Physics

Winner of the Ask Andy award today is Jacqueline Thurston, 15, a grade A student at St. Margaret's School who is well acquainted with her prize—a 15-volume set of Compton's Pictured Encyclopedia.

"I've used it many times," she said when she talked to the Times at the home of her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. M. C. McBride, 1332 Vimy. "I know how good it is, and am going to be really pleased with my own copy of it here."

The question which won her the prize, and which is answered today in the column on this page, was submitted by her some months ago.

LOTS OF STUDY

Miss Thurston is heading for a career in nuclear physics, and is setting up work habits now that will help her reach her goal.

"I watch television Friday night, and take Sunday morning off for church," she said, "and the rest of the time I study."

"You have to do it if you're going to get anywhere in the world." However, it's no great hardship for me to study. I like it."

Her first interest in science was astronomy, at the age of six. When she became exposed to physics and chemistry in school, they seemed to be a natural continuation of her knowledge of astronomy.

Mathematics came hard to her, but she enjoys the theory of mathematics, and is looking forward to more advanced work.

SPEAKS FRENCH

She is gifted in languages, and already can converse in French and understand Spanish.

"They come more easily to me than sciences," she said, "but I intend to carry on with physics."

Born in England, she is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. S. Thurston, 2851 Admirals Road, and has been in Victoria for 10 years. Holidays are spent with her parents, but during school she finds it more convenient to stay with her aunt and uncle, who are closer to St. Margaret's. She is in grade 11, and plans three months in Europe after matriculation, and before going on to university.

"That may be at UBC, England, a small university I know of in France, near Switzerland, or maybe even the University of Mexico. I'll know better when the time comes."

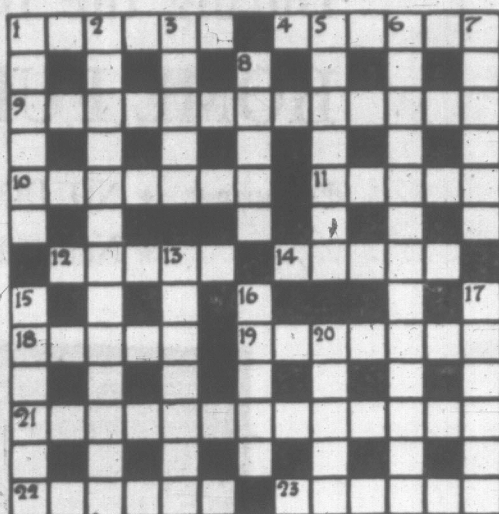

They are among the speediest of all animals. Only the cheetah is faster than a gazelle.

Gazelles roam the hottest, driest, stoniest deserts of Africa and Asia. There are gazelles in the Sahara Desert, in the deserts of India, Lybia, Palestine and Syria. Altogether there are about 60 different varieties. All of them live miles from trees and miles from water. They are content to chew the desert scrub and scorch in the desert sun. These dainty little deer, it seems, are much harder than they look.

SOLUTION FRIDAY

Young Thief Advised To 'Pull Up Socks'

A 16-year-old boy was advised to "pull up his socks" during a jail term imposed in city police court Tuesday for theft of a car Feb. 7.

Donald Richard Nelson, 3312 Cook, was given one year definite and six months indeterminate at Oakalla jail young offenders' unit for stealing a car from Jameson Motors Ltd., 740 Broughton.

It was discovered in Oak Bay a short time later after it was in a crash with another car, resulting in injury to a 16-year-old girl Nelson had as a passenger.

Magistrate William Ostler said, "At 16 years the real problem is to know what to do which will be best for you and best for the community."

BEST THING

He noted, "Since 1952 you've been in institutions—as young as that," and had been a problem since infancy.

"The best thing the probation officer suggests is to put you in an institution where you can get counseling and guidance, where something can be done to help you."

"I'm committing you to the young offenders' unit. You'll find there are opportunities to help you."

"I hope you take advantage of it to pull your socks up for your own sake," the magistrate said.

TRAFFIC FINES

In city police court Tuesday:

Norman Alfred Ware, 3110 Shelbourne, $25 for violation of driver's licence restriction. Sandor Domokos, 635 Hillside, $10 for failing to carry motor vehicle registration in a conspicuous place.

Keith Jorgensen, 4229 Wilkinson, $10 for driving with view to the side obstructed. Alfred Harold Venables, 2632 Blanshard, $50 for driving while under suspension, $10 for failing to notify motor vehicles branch of a change of registration and $10 for driving without a front plate.

Pay-as-You-Go Sacred Policy

TORONTO (CP)—E. Shipley Birrell, elected first provincial leader of the Social Credit party in Ontario during the weekend, Monday presented a 12-point party platform calling for a pay-as-you-go policy for provincial financing.

Mr. Birrell said Social Credit would prohibit any future provincial debt and pay off existing debts to embark on a current financing plan.

VERNON RIDGWAY

Gentlemen of distinction . . . seen on Victoria streets . . . favor returning to the . . . jaunty, sophisticated . . . reasonably comfortable . . . . . bowler hats . . . .

BOWLERS ARE BACK—This may come as a surprise to the select few gentlemen who weren't aware the hard-hat type of headgear ever went away, and it certainly is a surprise to the clothing industry, which did nothing to promote the resurgence of the bowler and was, in fact, caught in short supply when more and more men decided to switch from soft felts to narrow-brimmed, full-crowned bowlers. In this little bit of England, bowlers might be considered normal wear, but the craze actually started in Toronto, Montreal and the eastern United States about six months ago, and is just starting to reach its peak here. The last period of popularity started to taper off about 1926, and at that time nearly every bowler was a black bowler. Now there is a demand for grey and brown. One

Victoria clothier reports he has a waiting list for an order of the lighter colored hats, expected to arrive momentarily. Dealers here were warned of the resurgence by articles in trade magazine a few months back, but didn't take the warning seriously until customers started asking. Bowlers (once known as billycocks, later as derbies) were first popular in England about 1850. The name, of course, comes from the bowl-shaped appearance. The hat was a favorite with the riding-to-the-hounds set, who felt the hard hat gave some degree of protection on occasions when the horse went one way and the rider another. Now it's simply a matter of appearance, and the way things are going, it would appear one must be well bowled to be well dressed. (Times Photos by Irving Strickland.)

MONTE ROBERTS

Feeling restless, tired, logy, run-down, irritable, sleepless, exhausted, bored, achy, allergic, introspective, cross, angry, out-of-sorts?

You are suffering from the Mid-Februarys, my friend. But never fear. The Mid-Februarys is an ailment common in the northern portions of this hemisphere. And fortunately, there is a quick, economical cure for the Mid-Februarys.

It costs only a few postage stamps. But before revealing the cure for this ailment, let us examine the cause of the Mid-Februarys.

The Mid-Februarys occur because this is mid-February. Christmas is far behind; the only thing in the foreseeable future is (ugh!) income tax time; and summer lies, lo, these many moons away.

This latter statement is the root cause of the Mid-Februarys, and also the secret of their cure.

Because this is mid-February, you cannot have a vacation.

But it is obvious a vacation would cure your Mid-Februarys.

PLAN YOUR SUMMER VACATION NOW

And plan a real dandy one. The only restriction on how dandy is the number of postage stamps used.

Write all the travel companies and travel agencies and steamship lines and airlines and guided tour companies and transcontinental bus companies and government travel bureaus and Drive-Yourself agencies.

Explain you are thinking of taking a little trip in August, and what do they suggest?

Then sit back and wait for the literature to arrive.

When it begins to flow in, over the breaking back of your postman, be selective.

Devote one evening to planning a vacation trip in the Laurentian Mountains.

Spend another evening deciding which of the suggested safaris into darkest Africa would best suit your sense of adventure.

By the time you have devoted sufficient effort to planning your vacation in all the places recommended in the literature you receive, your Mid-Februarys will have long since disappeared.

And the time for your vacation will have arrived.

Then, of course, like all right-minded Victorians, you will either go to Mount Douglas or on a safari to darkest Sooke.

*NOTE: There are two classes to whom this does not apply. Those who are having their vacations now because (a) they are so junior in their organization they have to, and (b) those who are so senior they take them now. And also then.

OIL PAINTING OF CARIBOU CATTLE DRIVE will appear on covers of B.C. Telephone Co. and North-West Telephone Co. directories this year. Applying finishing touches is artist Peter Ewart of Langley. Scene is at Gang Ranch near Dog Creek, with Fraser River in background. First colorful cover, used last year, was picture of Fraser River stern wheeler.

'NOT JUSTIFIED'

Protests Follow Sea Lion Killing

Protests against the shooting Tuesday of a 2,000-pound bull sea lion at Brentwood Bay were voiced today by biologists, members of the Victoria Natural History Society and many residents of the Greater Victoria area.

The sea lion was shot by Jim

Creed, son of fishing guide Claude Creed, Creed's Landing, Brentwood, who fired seven rifle bullets to put the big "boy" away.

The "lion" was killed off Stonehouse in the Malahat portion of the bay.

Mr. Creed said he killed the mammal because sea lions destroy salmon.

Dr. Clifford Carl, director of the provincial museum, said he was wrong and there was no "justification for killing the mammal."

Scientific studies conducted at the Nanaimo biology station in the past year show that sea lions exist mainly on coarse fish, he said. These included bullheads, sculpins, flounders and other varieties of non-commercial fish.

PROTECTED IN U.S.

He noted that sea lions were protected in the United States.

Mrs. H. W. S. Soulsby, president of the Victoria Natural History Society, said biologists or game wardens should be consulted before animals or birds are killed.

"If a mammal, bird or animal is causing some trouble the proper authorities should be requested to get rid of it," she said.

Killing sea lions deprive people from seeing an interesting mammal, she said.

She said there was no excuse "in this enlightened age to kill an animal on the spot."

"We have experts who are quite capable of controlling animals when they become a nuisance," she added.

Gordon Greenwood and Michael Perks placed first in the Victoria Duplicate Bridge Club open pairs championship Tuesday. Other winners were: Louis Lindholm, Doug Tuck, second; Elizabeth Warren, Ethel Cleworth, third; Leslie Stewart, Tony Marsh, fourth; Lillian Goodwin, Dick Lipsey, fifth.

Both ministers said there was "gangsterism" tactics in some areas of union leadership.

Two Contracts Stabilize Shipyard's Work Forces

VMD Wins $150,000 Barge Job

Victoria Machinery Depot Ltd. and Yarrows Ltd. are starting work this week on contracts which will do much to improve an employment picture which has been extremely gloomy this winter.

VMD today announced a $150,000 contract to build a steel barge for Arctic Shipping Co., Edmonton.

On Friday Yarrows will receive the hull of the icebreaker CGS Cammell for completion and fitting out. Cammell was launched at North Vancouver Tuesday.

The VMD contract means that projected lay-offs can be postponed, general manager H. S. Hammill said today, and the work force will be stabilized at about 540. The yard also has a $3,000,000 contract for a B.C. government ferry in hand.

SEVEN-MONTH JOB

Yarrows will employ about 150 men for seven months on the icebreaker.

The Arctic shipping barge is identical to one built by VMD last year. The design, especially created for work in northern waters is by naval architect Derek Cove of Vancouver.

When completed, the barge will be towed from Vancouver with a load of equipment and supplies. It will arrive at McKenzie Bay via Bering Strait.

The steel barge is 175 feet long, 44 feet in beam,

STEEL COMING

VMD also reported today that steel for the provincial ferry is expected Friday, and fabrication work will start next week. Loft work is already underway.

The icebreaker for Yarrows will be towed here Friday for completion and fitting out.

The icebreaker is named after Dr. Charles Cammell, geologist, explorer, and former federal deputy minister of mines and resources.

Sponsor at the launching was Mrs. Howard Green, wife of the minister of public works.

Fitting out at Yarrows is expected to be completed about mid-August.

IT'S A LOT OF OREGON GRAPE

Wayce displays here. The 11-foot "bush" found by members of the Victoria Junior Natural History Society on a recent outing, is believed by provincial botanists to be the largest ever found in B.C. It was discovered on the Patricia Bay Indian Reserve. It is not uncommon to find this variety of the holly-like Oregon Grape growing up to five feet in height, but 11 feet is definitely out of the ordinary, and two or three feet is more the rule.

Lawyer Elects Trial by Judge In Forgery Case

Victoria lawyer Elmer V. Finland, 948 Old Esquimalt, elected trial by a judge without a jury when he was charged in city police court today with forgery in connection with the obtaining of a marriage licence.

He was remanded to Wednesday to fix a date for preliminary hearing on the four counts against him dated Jan. 13, 1959.

It is charged that the accused forged the names W. J. E. Brookbank and R. N. Langton on a department of health and welfare application form requiring parental consent to the issuance of a licence for Patricia N. Langton and Burke E. Brookbank to marry.

The other two counts charge Finland, knowing the documents to be forged, used, dealt or acted upon them as if they were genuine.

TIMES CARTOON ON SHIP FIGHT TO HANG IN CRUMP'S WORKSHOP

N. R. Crump, CPR president, was presented in Montreal Tuesday with the original of Sid Barron's cartoon on the ferry withdrawal which appeared in the Times last Thursday. The cartoon showed seagulls attacking a CPR policeman on a deserted dock.

The original was presented by Stuart Keate, Times publisher, who carried civic arguments to Mr. Crump for continuation of ferry service.

Mr. Crump intends to frame it for his home workshop.

Time Limitation Argued at Appeal

The defence's main argument in the Sommers-Gray bribery and conspiracy appeal—that they should not have been prosecuted on bribery charges more than two years old—today was challenged by prosecutor Victor Dryer.

Angelo Branca, counsel for former lands and forests minister Robert E. Sommers, is basing the bulk of his argument on this one issue.

He claimed Monday, the opening day of the appeal, that the limitation section of the old Criminal Code under which Sommers and Gray's convictions were secured stipulates that there can be no prosecution on bribery charges more than two years old.

His parallel argument was that if the ruling applied to bribery, it also applied to prosecution on conspiracy charges, and that the prosecution should not have proceeded.

INCORRECT

Today Mr. Dryer, in the third day of the appeal expected to end late Thursday, argued that Mr. Branca was "not quite correct" and that the time limit had not expired.

He said that when the new Criminal Code came into effect, some of the old code's provisions were continued, "but broken up into different sections of the act."

"I say that when the new code came into effect the time limit had not expired and the right of prosecution was continued."

He added that while there seemed to be no one provision in the new code permitting charges to be laid under offences committed while the old code was in force, there was right of prosecution "by implication."

He also argued that the limitation provision applied to the "person enforcing the right of prosecution," rather than becoming a matter of defence.

PROCEDURAL

The question was a procedural one, permitting the right of prosecution to continue in effect "unless a contrary intention is expressed."

Mr. Dryer then launched into a 30-minute discussion of the word "procedure" and "right," citing one Australian case and others dating as far back as the 1800s.

"The effect of those cases shows that this right (of prosecution) is related to procedure, and can be applied retrospectively."

THREE OUT

Earlier, the court threw out three grounds of appeal made by Sommers and Gray.

These were: that it was "unfair" to try the defendants with 25 charges at one time; that conspiracy could involve only one substantive or bribery charge, not 24 as in the Sommers case; and that the trial should have been discharged when a "prejudicial" story appeared in the Vancouver press.

(The story headline named H. W. Gray a "kingpin" in the alleged conspiracy. It brought a total fine of $5,000 for contempt by the newspaper, the Vancouver Sun.)

INTELLIGENT

Tuesday, while Gray's counsel, J. R. Nicholson, was arguing that it was unfair to charge the accused with a multiplicity of counts at one time, presiding Justice Mr. H. I. Bird commented:

"Despite the fact 37 counts were put at once, it would seem the jury on the face of it brought in a very intelligent series of verdicts."

Mr. Nicholson also argued that the accused had not been required to plead on the final indictment, and therefore were illegally tried.

"The final indictment entered by the Crown against eight accused was not properly endorsed," he said. "There was complete disregard for this section of the code."

"In my opinion, the whole proceedings from then on were nullified."

At this, Mr. Dryer said he intended to take the position that the final indictment was, in fact, properly endorsed.

Motor-Vehicle Branch Stays

Attorney-General Robert Bonner today gave a flat "no" to the question of transfer of the B.C. motor vehicle branch from Victoria to Vancouver.

Opposition Leader Robert Strachan had filed a question in the House, asking if any such plans had been formulated. Two Vancouver Social Credit MLAs had made the suggestion for "economy and efficiency."

TOPICS OF THE DAY

The standing legislative committee on labor, now studying the B.C. unemployment problem, will ask Lands and Forests Minister Ray Wiliston to appear at an early date.

The committee, headed by William Murray (SC, Prince Rupert), wants more information on the suggestion by the minister last week, that industrial closure of the woods in fire season, may be halted.

The provincial museum annual program of movies for school children of Greater Victoria begins Saturday with 9:30 and 11 a.m. showings of "Island Explorations."

Tickets are being distributed in the schools as seating space is limited. School bus tickets will be honored where children show their museum admission tickets.

A similar series for the general public begins Feb. 22 at 2:30 p.m.

Venture Cadets Leave Monday On Cruise to South Sea Ports

Second major training group for naval cadets attending HMCS Venture at Esquimalt will leave the RCN base here Monday.

Ports of call will include stops in the Hawaiian, Fiji and Samoa islands.

Embarked in four frigates of the Fourth Canadian Escort Squadron will be 45 second-year cadets. Ships will be Sussexvale, Antigonish, Beacon Hill and Ste. Therese.

The four ships will arrive at Pearl Harbor March 3, and leave March 5.

From Pearl Harbor, Sussexvale and Ste. Therese will go to Pago, in the Samoa Islands, while Antigonish and Beacon Hill will proceed to Apia, an other port in the same island group. They will reach port March 14, leave March 17.

The four frigates will then rendezvous and steam to Suva in the Fiji Islands, arriving March 21 for a seven-day visit.

On the homeward voyage, the frigates will be at Pearl Harbor April 6 to 8 and arrive at San Diego April 17. On April 20 they will start a week of exercises in that area.

Leaving California waters April 27, the ships will arrive at Esquimalt May 1.

The first HMCS Venture training cruise earlier this year took 85 first-year cadets to the Hawaiian Islands.

Write Those Letters Now On Handsome Notepaper!

By PENNY SAVER

How full is that "to-be-answered" slot in your writing desk? Aha! Do I detect a blush? If it's any consolation, you're not the only one. From a little secret snooping around friends' houses I've found alarming numbers of unanswered boxes full to overflowing. To make a confession, when I get up enough courage to look, I have a sneaking suspicion I'm going to unearth some of last year's letters, still not acknowledged!

The only answer is to find some note paper that will inspire you to literary heights, take pen in hand and do it now. For those neglected friends of yours in the east or overseas I've found boxes of note cards on sale—featuring artistic paintings of totem poles. They would lend a "local color" touch to that out-of-town message. A dozen cards are 50 cents.

Do you often use a scent of violets for your perfume? Or do you have a distant friend who loves heather, or chooses lily-of-the-valley for her cologne?

I've found sweet fold-over notes, with a tiny spray of flowers print in a corner, scented to match. In the palest pink, mauve and pastel tints, there are boxes with any of the three flowers mentioned at 65 cents each.

Generous-sized sheets of writing paper, white with a flower print at the top corner—magnolia, wild rose, field blossoms, even pine—are faintly scented to match. Box is 69 cents. (Plain white sheets included).

There are boxes and boxes of stationery on sale at the store... among them some heavy English hand-made parchment with deckle edge and envelopes. They're low in price!

There's a value-packed sale on books in town now! If you love reading, this will be your meat. I saw a beautiful picture book with scenes of England and it was only $1. This Pearl Buck novel for $1 is certainly a good buy and a book you'll want in your library. English paper backs are priced at 25 cents each.

If there's a fisherman or yachtsman in the house, here is the book of 1959 tide tables at 10 cents.

THE BETTER HALF

by Bob Barnes

"We're paying you to remove it—not inventory it!"

DEAR ABBY...

Time for a Change

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Dear Abby: The woman who is on my party line listens in on all my calls. I was never so mad in all my life as this morning. A friend of mine called and asked me if I had the address of a certain woman who belonged to our church group a few years ago and moved to another city. I said I had it on my Christmas card list and would get it for her. This other woman who was listening butted in and said: "Wait a minute until I get a pencil. I'd like to have it, too." Now Abby, what would you do about a problem like mine?

DUMFOUNDED.

Dear Dumb: If the government ever needs brass she could scrap herself and make a fortune. P.S.—That's grounds for asking for another line.

Dear Abby: My sister, her husband and their 17-year-old daughter came to stay with us for the weekend. We are not heavy drinkers, but we always have a little something in the house to offer guests. My husband served highballs to the adults and opened a bottle of pop for the 17-year-old daughter. She poured it down the sink and fixed herself a Scotch and soda. I said nothing but my husband removed the glass from her hand and said, "Not in this house!" She ran sobbing from the room, her mother after her and they packed and cleared out in half an hour. I say my husband was out of line as long as she was drinking in front of her parents. Don't you agree?

VERY ANGRY.

Dear Very: Your husband is very much in line, but he could have been much more diplomatic and avoided a scene.

Dear Abby: Please help me make the most important decision of my whole life. I have a wonderful boy friend who has asked me to marry him and my answer would be yes, excepting that he has one bad trait. First let me tell you about his good points. He is tall, well-built, an ex-university football player. He has a degree in engineering and is an executive in a construction company. He has a deep interest in home life and is devout in his religion. He is kind, honest, sincere and does not drink or gamble. But, he brags.

DISTURBED.

Dear Disturbed: I think he has something to brag about. Say yes!

Dear Abby: I am a boy of 14 and where I live there aren't any girls to do baby-sitting so

APPLE FRITTERS

One cup sifted all-purpose flour, 1 teaspoon baking powder, ¼ teaspoon salt, 1 tablespoon sugar, 2 eggs, separated, ½ cup milk, 1½ cups finely chopped peeled apple, ½ cup cooking oil.

Sift together dry ingredients. When serving as dessert add a little cinnamon and nutmeg. Combine beaten egg yolks and milk, add to dry ingredients, mixing just until smooth. Add chopped apple, then fold in stiffly-beaten egg whites.

Heat oil in deep frying pan about 3 minutes, or until cube of bread will brown in 1 minute. Drop batter by spoonful into hot fat, fry until golden brown, turn to brown other side. Makes about 12 apple fritters.

Fresh apple pancakes are delicious when served with thin slices of breakfast ham, little pork sausages or back bacon. To make them, sift together 2 cups all-purpose flour, 2 tablespoons sugar, 4 teaspoons baking powder and 1 teaspoon salt. Mix 2 well-beaten eggs combined with 2 cups milk, 2 tablespoons melted butter and 1 cup finely chopped raw apples. Bake on hot pancake griddle. Dot with butter and sprinkle with sugar.

Here Are Helpful Hints On Coloring Your Hair

Many more women than you might think do something to their hair. With modern techniques and products, it is impossible to tell what is real and what has been added in color.

In case you are considering using a temporary rinse or a permanent tint, let me offer a few suggestions to guide you. In the first place, there are a few decisions you must make. Are you going to use a color as near your natural shade as possible?

If you wish to change the color some, but not drastically, then do you want it a little darker or do you want it lighter? Then you must decide whether you want a shade with some red or gold tones or one without.

If you are at all shy about this, it is best to avoid an extreme change. Also the skin has a tendency to fade out with the years. Therefore, your best color is likely to be a shade or two lighter than your natural color.

If you have an olive complexion, you probably will look best with one of the darker shades. Too blonde a hue will not be flattering. Women with fair skins can choose almost any color. Those who have quite a lot of pink in their faces can choose either a lighter or darker color. However, they should

Horrors! Identical Gowns Worn At Party; Women Laugh It Off

By JUDY NICHOLSON

It happened at the smorgasbord dinner hosted by T. Eaton Company at Victoria Curling Club Tuesday evening.

Two women were discovered wearing identical gowns.

Mrs. Mary Johnson, who is here from Trail for the British Columbia Ladies' Curling play-downs, arrived at the party wearing a royal blue wool sheath dress. Her jewelry was a gold rope, knotted at the neck and her accessories were in black suede.

Ten minutes later, Mrs. Johnson thought she was seeing things.

Mrs. E. Langdon, Victoria, walked in wearing an identical dress in the same color, with the same type of gold chain around her neck and black suede accessories.

After a stunned silence, the women decided to make the best of it.

Decision lasted until W. Gilmour, manager of T. Eaton

Company, stood up to speak after dinner. He dropped a small remark about "dresses," walked back to their tables.

Mrs. Johnson and Mrs. Langdon carried on the joke. They raided the head table and shouted, Mr. Gilmour down with:

"We want our money back!"

The episode ended in roars of laughter as the two women

American Cars Unchallenged, Let's Face It

I have just sampled just about the best car within my recent experience, the only qualification to the statement being that by no means all 1959 cars have as yet passed through my hands.

In fact, rather fewer have than is usual by this time of the year, but if the 1959 Monarch is any indication of the standard of the 1959 cars, then I shall try to lose no more time in driving more of them.

The smaller type of imported car has justly gained very wide popularity. But let us face the unalterable fact that the American-type car remains unchallenged in respect of size-per-dollar, power-per-dollar, sheer comfort-per-dollar. To find an imported car that can come even close to the Monarch as a silky, silent, effortless-over-the-road long-distance traveller, its purchase price would be at least three times as much as that of the 1959 Monarch.

And it is only advantageous, in respect of continent-wide service facilities, that this exclusively Canadian Monarch bears close mechanical resemblance to another famous Ford product widely sold not only here, but also in the United States.

The 1959 Monarch is a very large car, indeed; yet, the easy, power-assisted delicacy of all controls, coupled with the very best driving position yet encountered by the writer, combine to belie the car's great size and make driving it, even in traffic and parking, child's play out of all necessary manoeuvres.

Quick Steering

Precision is another word fully applicable to the Monarch's steering response, which is also delightfully and surprisingly quick. A perfectly-positioned, and delightfully small steering wheel completes this flawlessly happy picture.

The brakes, assisted by vacuum-servo (i.e., so-called "power-brakes"), are also the best of their type I have ever encountered; and the parallel-acting windshield-wipers are something all other American manufacturers might well copy, as I found out to my benefit while driving the Monarch in drenching rain.

The Ford Motor Co. has long since provide automatic transmissions of conspicuously high quality, and it is superfluous to comment upon the vast power even the smaller of the two available V-8 engines unleashes, quietly and without audible fuss, upon demand from your toes.

What Is Wrong?

Well, so far, so good. You may say now, let's have it, what is wrong with this paragon of automotive virtue?

I will tell you, and it is a matter of no little gravity. For, in all truth, just ahead of the driver's line of vision, there is a veritable red light district. Without exonerating the Monarch from this questionable practice, it is unfortunately in the vast majority among American cars; my final superlatives will be reserved for the car whose instrument panel includes proper needle-type gauges for oil-pressure and battery charge-discharge readings, which have gradually and so widely been replaced by mysterious-looking, and not too useful red warning lights. But for this one melancholy lapse, the 1959 Monarch is a true luxury car, at a price well below the luxury-car level.

COUNSELLORS ON READING?

A reading counsellor service was suggested to the public library board Tuesday by Coun. C. M. Nelles of Saanich.

He said it would be particularly helpful to retired persons by providing a "sort of self-improvement program."

Librarian John Lort said the service is provided in larger libraries and, in an informal manner, at the library here. He said he would study the suggestion for inauguration of a regular service.

Escape Clause In New Pact For Library

Victoria public library board Tuesday recommended that city council order drafting of a new library agreement with an escape clause for individual municipalities.

It asked for a by-law which would bring an eight-year controversy, over voting rights for outside municipalities, to a head.

Board member William Pinfold said the suggestion of voting rights had been "banded about since 1951" without being resolved.

NO VOTE

At present, the surrounding municipalities use the library services by paying on a per capita and circulation formula but their representatives on the board have no vote.

For the past four years city council unsuccessfully has attempted to obtain agreement of the other municipalities to help pay for the new addition in return for a vote on the board.

Mr. Pinfold said the weakness of this proposed arrangement was that it required unanimous agreement.

His proposal was that a new by-law be drawn up which would allow those municipalities that wished it to enter the long-term arrangement, and those that didn't want it to continue on the present basis.

Coun. G. K. Sammon of Esquimalt told the board that his municipality had gone on record as opposing the long-term arrangement.

"I want to make it clear that we are satisfied with the present arrangement and want to keep it," he said. "We don't want a vote."

Former Island Girl Returns With Big Show

Jane Kearsley, 18, a student at Alberni and Qualicum high schools two years ago, returns to B.C. this week under her stage name of Jane Cleeve as an actress with Canadian Players.

She will appear in both Pygmalion and Romeo and Juliet to be presented in Victoria Feb. 21.

She joined Canadian Players last September and has since been on tour throughout Canada.

While at school in Alberni and Qualicum, she took roles in school plays, and after moving to Ontario won the provincial cup at the Ontario Dramatic Verse Speaking competition.

At Stratford, where her family still lives, she took leading parts at the Stratford Little Theatre, and during summer months studied at the London (Ont.) Theatre School of the University of Western Ontario.

Meantime, she graduated from Stratford Collegiate Institute.

Douglas Day Gets Legal Recognition

Observance of Douglas Day—Nov. 19—was officially proposed in a bill brought before the B.C. Legislature Tuesday by Provincial Secretary W. E. Black.

A school holiday was held during centennial year, but the bill makes no such specification for the future.

Nov. 19, a proclamation was read at Fort Langley establishing the mainland colony of British Columbia and James Douglas was sworn as first governor.

The mistletoe long used for Christmas decorations was the sacred plant of the Druids in ancient Britain.

BOTH ARE PROBLEM TO DOCTORS

Extroverts or Introverts?

By TONY DICKASON

The human animal's bark is worse than his bite, doctors state.

Persons who loudly maintain "I can't stand hospitals" are normal, as "nobody enjoys an operation."

When faced with difficulties demanding medical attention, most individuals fall into the category labelled "co-operative."

This is the consensus obtained today from doctors attending the Pacific Coast Surgical Association convention under way here.

TWO CATEGORIES

Patients fall into two main psychological classifications—extrovert and introvert.

The trouble the medical fraternity has is to get the introvert to tell enough of his symptoms, and to cut the extrovert off before he starts a lengthy dissertation about grandmother's trauma.

Patients who telephone doctors for little purpose at all hours are not the bane of the medical man's existence as is commonly believed.

With the closer personal link established in recent years between doctor and patient, the man-in-white recognizes that "re-assurance" is an important part of all treatment.

RE-ASSURANCE

And this liaison is found in other aspects of the doctor-patient relationship more today than in the past.

"Most people want to know exactly what's going on. And they do better if they do know. People expect doctors to be human, and to let them know what the little pill is for."

Faith and trust in the doctor, is therefore the basis of satisfaction for both.

However, doctors were quick to point out that the public is too often led to believe that medicine is an exact and concrete science.

"This is not so. Some people expect even more than perfect results, obviously impossible with what we have to work with (i.e., the patient)."

There is a definite and distinct difference in individual reaction to pain noted by all men of medicine.

Nordic types don't react to pain as much as persons of the "romance languages" group — Italians and French for example. Jews also have a low pain threshold.

The intelligence quotient has nothing to do with reaction to pain.

SIMPLE TEST

Doctors have a simple test to determine just how sensitive new patients may be.

They'll tweeze an ear lobe, or dig a little deeper than necessary in the tummy and watch the result. Then they know how to handle you.

While the majority of patients can put up a good front to an operation, there is always that slightly panicky feeling plus the desire to head for the hills, even in a hospital nightshirt, before "O" hour.

One doctor recalled a patient of his who did.

Police Called in to Probe Gasoline-Fed Truck Blaze

Police were asked today to investigate one of two gasoline-fed fires which broke out one hour apart in Victoria and Saanich, Tuesday night.

A cartage van parked in a roofed port at the rear of Bray's Transfer, Ltd., 748 Pembroke Street, was destroyed by flames which could have been set deliberately, caused by a short electrical circuit or by a gasoline thief.

Two Saanich teenagers brushed serious injury and escaped with only a singeing when a flash fire burst out where they were working on an old motorcycle in the basement at 3035 Earl Grey Street, at 6.48 p.m.

The boys were Frank Ever, 16, of 3035 Earl Grey Street, and Gary Cook, 18, of 2897 Parkway Drive.

$1,500 DAMAGE

Firemen estimated damage to the Ever home at $1,500, with joists and sub-flooring, cardboard-covered walls, water heater, a cupboard and stored material burned or charred.

The fire may have been caused by gasoline fumes igniting from fire in a coal furnace, the water heater's gas flame or electrical spark from the motorcycle.

"We were emptying the gas tank on the bike," the boys said. "Suddenly there was a flash and the basement seemed filled with flames." There was much smoke and a fireman donned breathing mask to search the house when it was noted the Ever's boxer, Buster, was missing. The dog showed up later outside.

Blaze Destroys Record Warehouse

TORONTO (CP)—Fire early today destroyed a storage warehouse of Columbia Records of Canada Limited in suburban Scarborough township.

More than 300,000 records were damaged or destroyed. Many of them were to have been sent to thousands of Columbia record club members this week. Vice-President Robert Pamppe estimated the loss at "well over $500,000."

Alarm for the truck fire was rung in at 7.48 and city firemen sped to 748 Pembroke to find the large van blazing and scorching paint from a wrecker truck parked behind it.

Damage was prevented to trucks parked nearby and the transfer building itself.

Firemen found the cap from the truck's gasoline tank, located under the driver's seat,

B.C. Land-Clearing Plan Draws Interest From Afar

Farmers and would-be farmers from "many parts of Canada" are writing to the provincial government for information of new land-clearing loans. Agriculture Minister Newton P. Steacy said Monday.

He said a flood of letters to his office "indicate a new interest by people in other parts of Canada, in B.C. farm areas... especially in the Bulkley Valley and Peace River areas."

Main requests are to learn what land is available and how land values compare with other parts of Canada.

The minister announced new land-clearing loans in a speech in the Legislature about two weeks ago.

Amount of maximum loans was increased $1,000 to $5,000. If a farmer borrows to add to his present farm he must make a 25 per cent deposit and has 15 years to repay the balance. If the loan is for the purpose of starting a new farm, the applicant has 20 years to repay and for the first three years he is required to pay interest only.

PEARSON WON'T ACT

OTTAWA (CP)—Lester B. Pearson Monday refused an Ontario legislature member's request that the Liberal leader call Premier Smallwood of Newfoundland before the National Liberal Advisory Council to explain his attitude towards the International Woodworkers of America (I.W.O.A.).

"Do not propose to take action of the kind recommended in your telegram," Mr. Pearson wired Albert Wren, Liberal MLA for Kenora.

Victim Pinned for 20 Minutes

One of a trio of marine pilots in a fatal auto crash last August was so badly jammed in the wreckage it took 20 minutes to free him, a rescuer told a preliminary hearing Monday.

It was the second sitting of a preliminary hearing on a charge of criminally negligent driving against South Burnaby pilot Capt. Patrick Norman Morrison, allegedly the driver of a car in which he and Capt. John McKay, 36, of Vancouver, were seriously injured.

Capt. William O. Boyce, 41, also of Vancouver, died in hospital the day after the crash. Evidence of five witnesses was added to that given last Thursday by 13 Crown witnesses to complete the prosecution's case temporarily. Prosecutor Kenneth Murphy said two more witnesses, including Capt. McKay, have yet to be heard.

VANISHED IN DUST

The hearing was adjourned to March 5.

Previous witnesses told of seeing the car driven south on Patricia Bay Highway at high speed, through a stop sign at Trans-Canada Highway then overturn and strike a steel lamp standard, disappearing in a huge cloud of smoke and dust about 11:30 p.m. Aug. 22. Nicholas Koudijs, 1008 Fenn, said he jumped out of his truck which had been headed north on Douglas Street just south of the intersection of Trans-Canada and Patricia Bay Highways.

He said he saw the dust cloud from a stop light at Boleskine and Douglas, a long block away. Police arrived at about the same time and Koudijs helped remove one man from the passenger side of the overturned car, he said.

"I thought there was only one, but then a leg fell down from the seat as we took the man out. Hey, there's another one in here," the witness said he exclaimed at the time, then the third man was noticed.

"He was jammed in underneath the steering column so bad it took us 20 minutes to get him out," Koudijs said.

The first Henley royal regatta on the Thames in England was rowed in 1839.

Architects Awarded $6,750 Fee

Supreme Court in Vancouver Monday awarded Architects Collaborative of B.C. judgment against Broadway Agencies Limited for $6,750 for preparation of plans in connection with a proposed shopping centre at Nanaimo. Broadway Agencies refused to go through with the $750,000 project for which the architects' fees would have been $45,000. Mr. Justice Arthur Lord found Architects Collaborative entitled to some money for work done.

Cumberland Man Loses Appeal

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Court of Appeal Tuesday dismissed an appeal of Robert Wilson McMullen, 19, of Cumberland, B.C., who had been convicted of breaking and entering and theft. McMullen was sentenced to a three-year term by Judge L. A. Hanna at Courtenay Nov. 12.

GANGES — Largest of the springs which gave Salt Spring Island its name years ago is about to be obliterated.

It is situated in the garden of Peter Cartwright, at Fernwood, about 150 yards from the shore, and the owner sees it as a blot on the landscape.

A smaller spring has been drained off, and the same fate awaits the larger. Both drains and the springs will be covered over with soil.

The springs are seepage through a large deposit of rock salt underlying a large portion of the end of the island. There are several in the forest behind Mr. Cartwright's property, and all are contained within a space of about two acres.

Bubbles of gas come up with the slow trickle of water from the spring, but there is no odor.

Grasses surrounding the large spring are similar in character to salt water beach grasses. In earlier years the springs were widely used by deer as a source of salt.

More Picnic Sites Sought on Island

GANGES — Special projects of Salt Spring Island Chamber of Commerce decided at the first meeting of the chamber's 1959 council, will be the provision of picnic spots for day visitors.

way at Ganges to make one picnic area, and to create others at Vesuvius, Fernwood and at two spots on Fulford Harbor.

It was announced signatures from absentee property owners on a petition to form a fire protection district now are being received, and an official count will be made shortly.

The affirmative vote of 70 per cent of ratepayers is needed to form the district.

Mrs. T. N. Vodden was appointed secretary, and council members are H. Hoffman, J. H. P. Frederick and D. G. Crofton, transportation; T. N. Vodden, J. R. W. Young and Mr. Wolfe-Milner, roads; Mr. Hoffman and Mr. Wilson, publicity; M. Munro, Mr. Lee and E. W. Watson, services; C. R. Horel, Mr. Lamb and R. Akerman, special projects; B. Acland, parks.

Annual installation dinner will be March 13.

THE PROOF WAS IN THE HOOKING

DUNCAN (CP) — Walt McNeely and Murray Davidson, of Duncan, spent two weeks ends catching the same fish—a 6½-pound steelhead.

After two attempts at hooking the fish two weeks ago, the fishermen tried again Saturday and caught the fish. The proof was a hook Davidson used the last time and still in the fish's mouth.

Baby Sitter Course Set At Colwood

COLWOOD — A course of instruction for baby sitters will start March 2 at Colwood Fire Hall under sponsorship of Colwood Fire Department, according to Fire Chief R. M. Emery.

The course will be limited to 35 girls of 11 years and older, and already 20 have applied.

Lecturers will be firemen, police and public health officials who will discuss fire control, first aid, and care of children and property.

The course, first of its kind on the lower Island, is similar to one given by firemen at Chemainus a year ago.

Chief Emery announced the B.C. fire marshal's instructional unit will start a six-week visit here Thursday.

CHIEF RE-ELECTED

At the annual election of officers, Chief Emery was re-elected for a three-year term with R. J. Proudfoot as assistant chief; A. G. Emery, captain, and R. R. Ridley, lieutenant.

Officers of the fire department benevolent association are H. R. Ridley, president; J. Lawrie, secretary, and A. V. Peatt, treasurer.

Stream-Clearance Urgent Need in B.C.

Clearing of streams to protect river banks and prevent soil erosion is one of the gravest problems facing British Columbia, Mrs. Louis Hagen (CCF-Grand Forks-Greenwood) said in the Legislature Tuesday.

"The government's new land-clearing program will be helpful to many," Mrs. Hagen said. "But some day we are going to have to pay out an equal sum for clearing our streams."

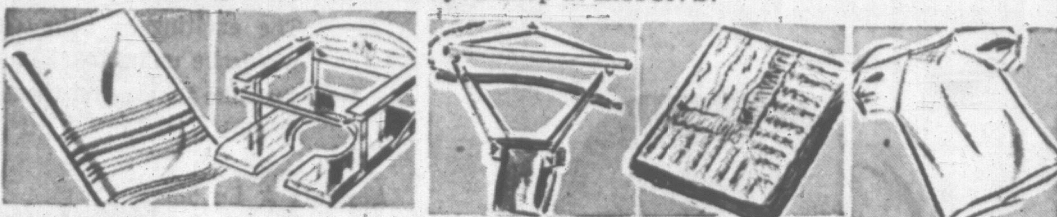

Sales of electronic computers made in Britain are expected to exceed £22,000,000 in 1959.

Man May Ride to Stars in 'Frozen Sleep'

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Experiments to determine if man can be frozen solid for years-long trips to other solar systems are under way at the University of California at Los Angeles.

Dr. John Lyman of UCLA's biotechnology laboratory plans to freeze mice and rats and believes his findings can be used to turn humans into ice-like statues for trips through space.

"The big problem is not getting man into space," Dr. Lyman said in an interview Monday. "The problem is to keep him from becoming psychotic—going insane—under the unnatural conditions and confinement of space flight."

Giving man a natural environment—building space ships big enough to provide oxygen, food and social and recreational facilities—may be prohibitive in cost, Dr. Lyman believes.

The best answer, he said, is frozen sleep. The voyager would not need food, oxygen or companionship. His ship would be operated by electronic brains and he would be revived by an automatic warming process as he neared his destination.

Within two weeks, Dr. Lyman and his associates will begin dunking mice in dry ice-and-alcohol baths to reduce their temperatures to as low as 100 degrees below zero.

"Experiments with monkeys have shown that their temperature can be lowered to 39.2 degrees for up to two hours without detectable after-effects," Dr. Lyman said. "The monkeys, however, were merely in a stage of hibernation."

"What we want to do is to stop the life processes completely, then resume them at will.

"If we can do this with man, he will arrive at a distant star—which might take him several normal lifetimes to reach—not one day older than he was when he left earth."

Another frozen sleep would bring the space traveller home years or even centuries after his departure, said Dr. Lyman, and he would have aged only for the period between frozen sleeps.

'Those Balloons' Sold in Quebec

GRAND FALLS, Nfld. (CP)—Five loggers, members of the International Woodworkers of America (IWA), were acquitted today on a charge of creating mischief and damage but three others were sentenced to three months in jail or a $300 fine.

Magistrate G. B. Trickett said there was no evidence against five of the loggers except they were in a group of 79 loggers arrested Feb. 7 following a raid on two Anglo-Newfoundland Development Company woods camps in the Sandy Lake area.

He also ordered the three convicted men to post bonds of $250 each to assure they would keep the peace for the next two years.

Reds Menace To Castro

MIAMI, Fla. (AP)—A revolution against the Fidel Castro regime in Cuba is spawning in Miami, the Miami News said today.

It quoted a former Castro companion, Rafael Del Pino, as saying Castro is blind to a Communist menace and "we still have time to work underground against his government if it isn't cleaned up."

Ald. Geoffrey Edgelow, chairman of Greater Victoria Centennial Committee which purchased the balloons from England for $6,000, said the deal was confirmed by Granby, Que., in a telegram.

The French-Canadian city celebrates its centennial this year.

Price was not disclosed but Edgelow said no loss will be suffered. He said the price would be revealed after final details are completed.

"The money from this sale will go into the trust fund established by the committee for a Greater Victoria civic auditorium," Ald. Edgelow said.

"When we finally close our books, we have hopes that the trust fund will stand at about $15,000."

He said it was "significant" that the provincial government had shown enthusiasm for the committee's decision to establish the trust fund.

INTO STORAGE

The balloons, about seven feet in diameter with gondolas suspended beneath, were purchased early last year to decorate the downtown area during centennial celebrations.

But the project came to grief when the balloons deflated as rapidly as they were inflated. They finally were put in storage, to the amusement of citizens.

MAKARIOS BALKS

Cyprus Talks Threatened

LONDON (AP)—Archbishop Makarios today refused to work with the Greek government delegation to the London conference on the future of Cyprus, Greek circles said.

The attitude of the exiled leader of Greek Cypriots could torpedo the conference, which opened Tuesday to work out independence for Cyprus.

He was unable to confirm the latest tangled development in the London conference, already snarled by a plane crash.

ADJOURNED

The conference was adjourned today to give Turkish Premier Adnan Menderes time to recover from injuries suffered Tuesday in the crash of an airliner bringing him from Ankara.

Highly authoritative British sources said it was possible Greek Foreign Minister Evangelos Averoff would officially inform Foreign Secretary Selwyn Lloyd of Makarios' stand at a meeting later in the day.

Turkey and Greece reached an agreement on independence for the troubled Mediterranean island at a conference at Zurich last week.

As reports of dissension mounted, an emergency meeting of the five-party conference was summoned for tonight.

Goodwill Trip

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Eisenhower left today for a goodwill trip to Mexico. His plane, Columbine III, took off at 2:14 p.m. and headed for Austin, Tex. After an overnight stop there, he will go on to Acapulco, Mexico.

It was the fourth straight win for the Okanagan rink in the seven-rink, round-robin competition.

Labor Minister Lyle Wicks dropped some vague hints Tuesday of his intention to legislate to curb the wings of B.C. labor.

But he didn't go so far as to make definite proposals—his speech posed more questions than it gave answers, despite predictions by apprehensive labor leaders.

One request by various industrial groups—that trade unions be required to be registered under the Societies Act—appeared to have the minister's support.

He said: "One thing now remains very clear, there must be some responsibility—equal responsibility on both sides of the fence."

ALL DIFFERENT

But generally speaking, members in the House, labor delegates in the public galleries and "veteran observers" all read different meanings into his address.

He did, however, refute Op-

Fare Rate Hike For Viscounts?

Trans-Canada Air Lines officials have indicated that fares will be increased on the Victoria-Vancouver-Seattle service when Viscount aircraft are introduced.

Times publisher Stuart Keate wired this information here Tuesday after conferring with senior TCA officials in Montreal as a spokesman for Greater Victoria intermunicipal committee and the Chamber of Commerce.

Mr. Keate, due to carry protests to deputy transport minister J. R. Baldwin today against Pacific Western Airlines' bid to take over the service, said TCA confirmed it "will be pleased to continue the service" if PWA's application is rejected by the air transport board.

"These officials flatly deny (Victoria MP A. deB.) McPhillips' assertion that TCA will not carry on," Mr. Keate said.

"But they point out that some rate adjustment will be necessary in view of the fact that the per-mile rate of approximately 10 cents is the lowest in North America."

Turbo-propeller Viscounts are being considered for the service, but costs will go up because depreciation written off against the present DC-3 aircraft must be applied to the new planes.

Mr. Keate also said there is no truth to the rumor that TCA will buy Rotodynes—a cross between a helicopter and conventional aircraft—now.

"They see this four or five years away," he said.

Acting Mayor Arthur Dowell said he was "delighted that TCA has refuted Mr. McPhillips' statement and that they are prepared to carry on."

"The city will do everything possible to protect the PWA application."

"If the TCA rates must be increased, then the city will study that aspect at the appropriate time."

"But the main thing is to keep TCA here because it would be a severe loss to Victoria if it's position as the western terminus of a transcontinental service was dropped."

The first hour of his 1½-hour speech was a review of labor department affairs. The minister made it clear there will be no change in the status of the present part-time Labor

Temporary Run For 3 Months

Canadian Pacific Railway today announced it will operate a stop-gap "austerity" service between Victoria and Vancouver from Feb. 25 to May 15 when regular summer ferry service resumes.

The company will employ the Princess Marguerite on a daily round-trip schedule, leaving Vancouver at 10:30 a.m. and arriving at Victoria 2:45 p.m. for a half-hour lay-over. Return trip leaves Victoria at 3:15 p.m. and arrives at Vancouver at 7:30 p.m.

The present daily Victoria-Vancouver-Seattle service ends Feb. 25. It will be resumed May 15 and is expected to continue towards the latter part of September as in the past.

REVIEW

What happens then, the CPR has not said. It is understood that it will conduct a comprehensive review of the situation at that time.

Box score on representations made last week by Attorney-General Robert Bonner and Times publisher Stuart Keate, as a municipal and Chamber of Commerce delegate, shows:

1. Vancouver-Victoria day service will continue until the end of summer schedule.

2. Victoria-Seattle service ends Feb. 25, resumes May 15 and ends in September.

3. Victoria-Vancouver mid-night service ends for all time Feb. 25.

4. Victoria-Port Angeles summer service will not be resumed.

Meanwhile, Washington State Ferries plans to start a Sidney-Anacortes day service Feb. 26 which will provide the only winter connection with Seattle.

WSF also has applied to the U.S. coast guard for a permit to start its Victoria-Port Angeles service May 15, when the CPR usually started this run. Normally, WSF begins in mid-June.

Local officials hailed the CPR's reversal of its plans to shut down completely its winter connections to Victoria.

RELUCTANTLY

Company officials said the reversal was made "reluctantly" in view of expected losses.

Acting Mayor Arthur Dowell and Saanich Reeve George Chatterton said the still-fluid ferry situation should be hardened into some

'He'll Stay' Says Ike Of Dulles

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Eisenhower said today he wants State Secretary Dulles to remain on the job as long as Dulles believes he is able to carry on.

Eisenhower told his press conference that he and Dulles agreed Tuesday during Eisenhower's visit to Walter Reed Army Hospital to go right ahead with plans for international conferences.

He said he has given no thought to naming an alternate negotiator if Dulles is physically unable to attend the conferences because of his illness with cancer.

NO OTHERS DISCUSSED

Moreover, Eisenhower said he has not discussed with anyone the possibility of replacing Dulles as secretary of state.

Eisenhower said Dulles had never made the specific statement that he wanted to resign.

Eisenhower said Dulles' physicians have made it clear there is nothing about the secretary's illness that is going to touch his heart or his head.

Eisenhower went on to say that Dulles is his closest friend and confidant. In the whole complicated business of foreign affairs, Eisenhower went on, no man has the equal of Dulles' wisdom and knowledge.

So long as Dulles himself believes he has the ability to carry on, Dulles is exactly the man he wants, Eisenhower said.

KISUMU, Kenya (AP)—The Queen Mother got the silent treatment here today.

Thousands of Negroes lined the streets of this west Kenya port on Lake Victoria. But in contrast to cheering crowds elsewhere, they stood silently as she rode by.

The cool reception came after Oginga Odinga, chairman of the African-elected members of the Kenya legislative council, told Africans:

U.S. Tariff Policy Hit

OTTAWA (UPI)—Two prominent Canadians, one from government and the other from private industry, today accused the U.S. of imposing high tariff restrictions against this country "for political expediency" and thus denying both nations "the fruits of economic progress."

The charges were made by the trade department's director of international relations,

Ben Schwartzmann, and CPR president N. R. Crump at a one-day Canadian-American business conference sponsored by the chambers of commerce of the two nations.

Mr. Crump lashed out hardest. The policy of protectionism between the North American neighbor nations was not of Canada's making, he said.

"Rather it is discernible in the growing number of restrictions which, for reasons which appear to be no other than political expediency, the United States has chosen to impose on an already impressive range of resource imports, including lead, zinc and petroleum."

Schwartzmann said trade barriers erected by the U.S. were "putting back the clock."

U.S. tariffs on manufactured goods were "at prohibitive levels in many cases," he said.

KEITH DORMAN JOHN MCINTOSH JOHN WADE BILL HEANEY FRED MCGREGOR VERNON RIDGWAY
Gentlemen of distinction . . . seen on Victoria streets . . . favor returning to the . . . jaunty, sophisticated . . . reasonably comfortable . . . . . bowler hats . . .

BOWLERS ARE BACK—This may come as a surprise to the select few gentlemen who weren't aware the hard-hat type of headgear ever went away, and it certainly is a surprise to the clothing industry, which did nothing to promote the resurgence of the bowler and was, in fact, caught in short supply when more and more men decided to switch from soft felts to narrow-brimmed, full-crowned bowlers. In this little bit of England, bowlers might be considered normal wear, but the craze actually started in Toronto, Montreal and the eastern United States about six months ago, and is just starting to reach its peak here. The last period of popularity started to taper off about 1926, and at that time nearly every bowler was a black bowler. Now there is a demand for grey and brown. One

Victoria clothier reports he has a waiting list for an order of the lighter colored hats, expected to arrive momentarily. Dealers here were warned of the resurgence by articles in trade magazine a few months back, but didn't take the warning seriously until customers started asking. Bowlers (once known as billycocks, later as derbies) were first popular in England about 1850. The name, of course, comes from the bowl-shaped appearance. The hat was a favorite with the riding-to-the-hounds set, who felt the hard hat gave some degree of protection on occasions when the horse went one way and the rider another. Now it's simply a matter of appearance, and the way things are going, it would appear one must be well bowled to be well dressed. (Times Photos by Irving Strickland.)

MONTE ROBERTS

Feeling restless, tired, foggy, run-down, irritable, sleepless, exhausted, bored, aching, allergic, introspective, cross, angry, out-of-sorts?

You are suffering from the Mid-Februarys, my friend. But never fear. The Mid-Februarys is an ailment common in the northern portions of this hemisphere.

And fortunately, there is a quick, economical cure for the Mid-Februarys.

It costs only a few postage stamps. But before revealing the cure for this ailment, let us examine the cause of the Mid-Februarys.

The Mid-Februarys occur because this is mid-February. Christmas is far behind; the only thing in the foreseeable future is (ugh!) income tax time; and summer lies, lo, these many moons away.

This latter statement is the root cause of the Mid-Februarys, and also the secret of their cure.

Because this is mid-February, you cannot have a vacation.

But it is obvious a vacation would cure your Mid-Februarys.

PLAN YOUR SUMMER VACATION NOW

And plan a real dandy one. The only restriction on how dandy is the number of postage stamps used.

Write all the travel companies and travel agencies and steamship lines and airlines and guided tour companies and transcontinental bus companies and government travel bureaus and Drive-Yourself agencies.

Explain you are thinking of taking a little trip in August, and what do they suggest?

Then sit back and wait for the literature to arrive.

When it begins to flow in, over the breaking back of your postman, be selective.

Devote one evening to planning a vacation trip in the Laurentian Mountains.

Spend another evening deciding which of the suggested safaris into darkest Africa would best suit your sense of adventure.

By the time you have devoted sufficient effort to planning your vacation in all the places recommended in the literature you receive, your Mid-Februarys will have long since disappeared.

And the time for your vacation will have arrived.

Then, of course, like all right-minded Victorians, you will either go to Mount Douglas or on a safari to darkest Sooko.

*NOTE: There are two classes to whom this does not apply. Those who are having their vacations now because (a) they are so junior in their organization they have to, and (b) those who are so senior they take them now. And also then.

OIL PAINTING OF CARIBOO CATTLE DRIVE will appear on covers of B.C. Telephone Co. and North-West Telephone Co. directories this year. Applying finishing touches is artist Peter Ewart of Langley. Scene is at Gang Ranch near Dog Creek, with Fraser River in background. First colorful cover, used last year, was picture of Fraser River stern wheeler.

'NOT JUSTIFIED'

Protests Follow Sea Lion Killing

Protests against the shooting Tuesday of a 2,000-pound bull sea lion at Brentwood Bay were voiced today by biologists, members of the Victoria Natural History Society and many residents of the Greater Victoria area.

The sea lion was shot by Jim

Creed, son of fishing guide Claude Creed. Creed's Landing, Brentwood, who fired seven rifle bullets to put the big "boy" away.

The "lion" was killed off Stonehouse in the Malahat portion of the bay.

Mr. Creed said he killed the mammal because sea lions destroy salmon.

Dr. Clifford Carl, director of the provincial museum, said he was wrong and there was no "justification for killing the mammal."

Scientific studies conducted at the Nanaimo biology station in the past year show that sea lions exist mainly on coarse fish, he said. These included bullheads, sculpins, flounders and other varieties of non-commercial fish.

PROTECTED IN U.S.

He noted that sea lions were protected in the United States.

Mrs. H. W. S. Soulsby, president of the Victoria Natural History Society, said biologists or game wardens should be consulted before animals or birds are killed.

"If a mammal, bird or animal is causing some trouble the proper authorities should be requested to get rid of it," she said.

Killing sea lions deprive people from seeing an interesting mammal, she said.

She said there was no excuse "in this enlightened age to kill an animal on the spot."

"We have experts who are quite capable of controlling animals when they become a nuisance," she added.

Gordon Greenwood and Michael Perks placed first in the Victoria Duplicate Bridge Club open pairs championship Tuesday. Other winners were: Louis Lindholm, Doug Tuck, second; Elizabeth Warren, Ethel Cleworth third; Leslie Stewart, Tony Marsh, fourth; Lillian Goodwin, Dick Lipsey, fifth.

Two Contracts Stabilize Shipyard's Work Forces

VMD Wins $150,000 Contract

Victoria Machinery Depot Ltd. and Yarrows Ltd. are starting work this week on contracts which will do much to improve an employment picture which has been extremely gloomy this winter.

VMD today announced a $150,000 contract to build a steel barge for Arctic Shipping Co., Edmonton.

On Friday Yarrows will receive the hull of the icebreaker CGS Cammell for completion and fitting out Cammell was launched at North Vancouver Tuesday.

The VMD contract means that projected lay-offs can be postponed, general manager H. S. Hammill said today, and the work force will be stabilized at about 540. The yard also has a $3,000,000 contract for a B.C. government ferry in hand.

SEVEN-MONTH JOB

Yarrows will employ about 150 men for seven months on the icebreaker.

The Arctic shipping barge is identical to one built by VMD last year. The design, especially created for work in northern waters is by naval architect Derik Cove of Vancouver.

When completed, the barge will be towed from Vancouver with a load of equipment and supplies. It will arrive at McKenzie Bay via Bering Strait.

STEEL COMING

VMD also reported today that steel for the provincial ferry is expected Friday, and fabrication work will start next week. Loft work is already underway.

The icebreaker for Yarrows will be towed here Friday for completion and fitting out.

The icebreaker is named after Dr. Charles Cammell, geologist, explorer, and former federal deputy minister of mines and resources.

IT'S A LOT OF OREGON GRAPE

That pretty Marlene Woyce displays here. The 11-foot "bush" found by members of the Victoria Junior Natural History Society on a recent outing, is believed by provincial botanists to be the largest ever found in B.C. It was discovered on the Patricia Bay Indian Reserve. It is not uncommon to find this variety of the holly-like Oregon Grape growing up to five feet in height, but 11 feet is definitely out of the ordinary, and two or three feet is more the rule.

Lawyer Elects Trial by Judge In Forgery Case

Victoria lawyer Elmer V. Finland, 948 Old Esquimalt, elected trial by a judge without a jury, when he was charged in city police court today with forgery in connection with the obtaining of a marriage licence.

He was remanded to Wednesday to fix a date for preliminary hearing on the four counts against him dated Jan. 15, 1959.

It is charged that the accused forged the names W. J. E. Brookbank and R. N. Langton on a department of health and welfare application form requiring parental consent to the issuance of a licence for Patricia N. Langton and Burke E. Brookbank to marry.

The other two counts charge that Finland, knowing the documents to be forged, used, dealt or acted upon them as if they were genuine.

TIMES CARTOON ON SHIP FIGHT TO HANG IN CRUMP'S WORKSHOP

N. R. Crump, CPR president, was presented in Montreal Tuesday with the original of Sid Barron's cartoon on the ferry withdrawal which appeared in the Times last Thursday. The cartoon showed seagulls attacking a CPR policeman on a deserted dock.

The original was presented by Stuart Keate, Times publisher, who carried civic arguments to Mr. Crump for continuation of ferry service.

Mr. Crump intends to frame it for his home workshop.

Time Limitation Argued at Appeal

The defence's main argument in the Sommers-Gray bribery and conspiracy appeal—that they should not have been prosecuted on bribery charges more than two years old—today was challenged by prosecutor Victor Dryer.

Angelo Branca, counsel for former lands and forests minister Robert E. Sommers, is basing the bulk of his argument on this one issue.

He claimed Monday, the opening day of the appeal, that the limitation section of the old Criminal Code under which Sommers and Gray's convictions were secured stipulates that there can be no prosecution on bribery charges more than two years old.

His parallel argument was that if the ruling applied to bribery, it also applied to prosecution on conspiracy charges, and that the prosecution should not have proceeded.

INCORRECT

Today Mr. Dryer, in the third day of the appeal expected to end late Thursday, argued that Mr. Branca was "not quite correct" and that the time limit had not expired.

He said that when the new Criminal Code came into effect, some of the old code's provisions were continued, "but broken up into different sections of the act."

"I say that when the new code came into effect the time limit had not expired and the right of prosecution was continued."

He added that while there seemed to be no one provision in the new code permitting charges to be laid under offences committed while the old code was in force, there was right of prosecution "by implication."

He also argued that the limitation provision applied to the person enforcing the right (of prosecution), rather than becoming a matter of defence.

PROCEDURAL The question was a procedural one, permitting the right of prosecution to continue in effect "unless a contrary intention is expressed."

Mr. Dryer then launched into a 30-minute discussion of the word "procedure" and "right," citing one Australian termed by the Crown against all eight accused was not properly endorsed," he said. "There was complete disregard for this section of the code."

"In my opinion, the whole proceedings from then on were nullified."

At this, Mr. Dryer said he intended to take the position that the final indictment was, in fact, properly endorsed.

Motor-Vehicle Branch Stays

Attorney General Robert Bonner today gave a flat "no" to the question of transfer of the B.C. motor vehicle branch from Victoria to Vancouver.

Opposition Leader Robert Strachan had filed a question in the House, asking if any such plans had been formulated. Two Vancouver Social Credit MLAs had made the suggestion for "economy and efficiency."

Anyone wishing a question answered is invited to send the question, along with the Times, addressed to "Ask the Times," Editor, Questions and Answers will be published daily.

All questions should deal with matters of fact and be of general interest. The Times does not undertake to solve problems or legal problems. Nor will it attempt to put a value on old coins, stamps or antiques. These should be submitted to dealers.

CPA to Start National Run May 4?

VANCOUVER (CP)—The Sun said today Canadian Pacific Airlines has set May 4 as the starting date for its cross-Canada service in competition with Trans-Canada Air Lines.

Troops Sent to Quell Congo Riots

PARIS (AP)—Troop reinforcements were sent into the Congo today to quell riots in which 22 Africans have been killed and 76 injured.

Silent Welcome For Queen Mother

KISUMU, Kenya (AP)—The Queen Mother got the silent treatment here today.

Thousands of Negroes lined the streets of this West Kenya port on Lake Victoria. But in contrast to cheering crowds elsewhere on her East African tour they just stared silently as she rode by.

The cool reception came after Oginga Odinga, chairman of the African-elected members of the Kenya legislative council, told Africans: "Go and see her if you wish, but in view of the current political situation, she should not be given a really warm welcome."

Odinga is a staunch opponent of the government's land consolidation scheme for Africans. During the last legislative session he applauded at mention of the name of Jomo Kenyatta, convicted as an organizer of Mau Mau terrorists.

Labor Curb Hints by Wicks In 'Brinkmanship' Speech

By PETE LOUDON
Times Legislative Reporter

Labor Minister Lyle Wicks dropped some vague hints Tuesday of impending labor legislation to clip the wings of B.C. labor.

But he didn't go so far as to make definite proposals—his speech posed more questions than it gave answers, despite predictions by apprehensive labor leaders.

One request by various industrial groups—that trade unions be required to be registered under the Societies Act—appeared to have the minister's support.

He said: "One thing now remains very clear, there must be some responsibility—equal responsibility on both sides of the fence."

ALL DIFFERENT

But generally speaking, members in the House, labor delegates in the public galleries and "veteran observers" all read different meanings into his address.

He did, however, refute Oginga's charges that the government aimed to smash labor in B.C.

His address contrasted sharply with attacks on labor in recent days by two other

Pr. Marguerite Will Carry On Ferry Service

Canadian Pacific Railway today announced it will operate a stop-gap "austerity" service between Victoria and Vancouver from Feb. 25 to May 15 when regular summer ferry service resumes.

The company will employ the Princess Marguerite on a daily round-trip schedule, leaving Vancouver at 10:30 a.m. and arriving at Victoria 2:45 p.m. for a half-hour lay-over. Return trip leaves Victoria at 3:15 p.m. and arrives at Vancouver at 7:30 p.m.

Kelowna Rink Still Unbeaten

(See earlier story Page 12)

Mrs. Thelma Owen's rink from Kelowna continued undefeated in the B.C. ladies' curling championships, today defeating Vancouver Island champion Mrs. Kay Wright of Alberni 12-10.

It was the fourth straight win for the Okanagan rink in the seven-rink, round-robin competition.

Fifth-round results:

Hansen	280	240	220	X-14

Reds Menace To Castro

MIAMI, Fla. (AP)—A revolutionary movement against the Fidel Castro regime in Cuba is spawning in Miami, the Miami News said today.

It quoted a former Castro companion, Rafael Del Pino, as saying Castro is blind to a Communist menace and "we still have time to work underground against his government if it isn't cleaned up."

cabinet ministers, Highways Minister P. A. Gagliardi and Works Minister W. N. Chant, who hit at "gangsters" among labor leaders.

Mr. Wicks was critical of some labor methods. But in each instance where he marched boldly up to an issue, he side-stepped it at the last moment.

This brought the comment from unionist John Squire (CCF, Alberni): "If you lost the word 'if' you wouldn't be able to make a speech."

The first hour of his 1½-hour speech was a review of labor department affairs. The minister made it clear there will be no change in the status of the present part-time Labor

The present daily Victoria-Vancouver service ends Feb. 25. It will be resumed May 15 and is expected to continue towards the latter part of September as in the past.

REVIEW

What happens then, the CPR has not said. It is understood that it will conduct a comprehensive review of the situation at that time.

Box score on representations made last week by Attorney-General Robert Bonner and Times publisher Stuart Keate, as a municipal and Chamber of Commerce delegate, shows:

1. Vancouver-Victoria day service will continue until the end of summer schedule;
2. Victoria-Seattle service ends Feb. 25, resumes May 15 and ends in September;
3. Victoria-Vancouver mid-night service ends for all time Feb. 25;
4. Victoria-Port Angeles summer service will not be resumed.

Meanwhile, Washington State Ferries plans to start a Sidney-Anacortes day service Feb. 26 which will provide the only winter connection with Seattle.

WSF also has applied to the U.S. coast guard for a permit to start its Victoria-Port Angeles service May 15, when the CPR usually started this run. Normally, WSF begins in mid-June.

Local officials hailed the CPR's reversal of its plans to shut down completely its winter connections to Victoria.

RELUCTANTLY

Company officials said the reversal was made "reluctantly" in view of expected losses.

Acting Mayor Arthur Dowell and Saanich Reeve George Chatterton said the still-fluid ferry situation should be hardened into some

'Spy in the Sky'

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Congress was told today that U.S. weather satellites such as the Vanguard put in orbit Tuesday could be used to detect H-bomb tests in Russia.

Thet Makarios makes th' position precarious.

Quebec's inflation problem now.

SHALL WE TELL 'EM?

'Those Balloons' Sold in Quebec

The 64 centennial balloons, which ballooned into the biggest farce of centennial year, were sold today to a city in Quebec province.

Ald. Geoffrey Edgelow, chairman of Greater Victoria Centennial Committee which purchased the balloons from England for $6,000, said the deal was confirmed by Granby, Que., in a telegram.

The French-Canadian city celebrates its centennial this year.

NO LOSS

Price was not disclosed but Edgelow said no loss will be suffered. He said the price would be revealed after final details are completed.

The money from this sale will go into the trust fund established by the committee for a Greater Victoria civic auditorium. Ald. Edgelow said.

Goodwill Trip

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Eisenhower left today for a goodwill trip to Mexico. His plane, Columbine III, took off at 2:14 p.m. and headed for Austin, Tex. After an overnight stop there, he will go on to Acapulco, Mexico.

Physical Fitness Key to Future

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Eisenhower said today he wants State Secretary Dulles to remain on the job as long as Dulles believes he is able to carry on.

Eisenhower told his press conference that he and Dulles agreed Tuesday during Eisenhower's visit to Walter Reed Army Hospital to go right ahead with plans for international conferences.

He said he has given no thought to naming an alternate negotiator if Dulles is physically unable to attend the conferences because of his illness with cancer.

NO OTHERS DISCUSSED

Moreover, Eisenhower said he has not discussed with anyone the possibility of replacing Dulles as secretary of state.

Eisenhower said Dulles had never made the specific statement that he wanted to resign.

Eisenhower said Dulles' physicians have made it clear there is nothing about the secretary's illness that is going to touch his heart or his head.

Eisenhower went on to say that Dulles is his closest friend and confidant. In the whole complicated business of foreign affairs, Eisenhower went on, no man has the equal of Dulles' wisdom and knowledge.

So long as Dulles himself believes he has the ability to carry on, Dulles is exactly the man he wants, Eisenhower said.

TCA Fare Hike for Viscounts?

Trans-Canada Air Lines officials have indicated that fares will be increased on the Victoria-Vancouver-Seattle service when Viscount aircraft are introduced.

Times publisher Stuart Keate wired this information here Tuesday after conferring with senior TCA officials in Montreal as a spokesman for Greater Victoria Inter-municipal committee and the Chamber of Commerce.

Mr. Keate, due to carry protests to deputy transport minister J. R. Baldwin today against Pacific Western Airlines' bid to take over the service, said TCA confirmed it "will be pleased to continue the service" if PWA's application is rejected by the air transport board.

These officials flatly deny (Victoria MP A. deB.) McPhillips' assertion that TCA will not carry on. Mr. Keate said, "But they point out that some rate adjustment will be necessary in view of the fact that the per-mile rate of approximately 10 cents is the lowest in North America."

COSTS GO UP

Turbo-propeller Viscounts are being considered for the service, but costs will go up because depreciation written off against the present DC-3 aircraft must be applied to the new planes.

Mr. Keate also said there is no truth to the rumor that TCA will buy Rotodynes—a cross between a helicopter and conventional aircraft—now.

"They see this four or five years away," he said.

Acting Mayor Arthur Dowell said he was "delighted" that TCA has refuted Mr. McPhillips' statement and that they are prepared to carry on. "The city will do everything possible to protect the PWA application."

"If the TCA rates must be increased, then the city will study that aspect at the appropriate time."

"But the main thing is to keep TCA here because it would be a severe loss to Victoria if it's position as the western terminus of a trans-continental service was dropped."

Man May Ride to Stars in 'Frozen Sleep'

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Experiments to determine if man can be frozen solid for years-long trips to other solar systems are under way at the University of California at Los Angeles.

Dr. John Lyman of UCLA's biotechnology laboratory plans to freeze mice and rats and believes his findings can be used to turn humans into ice-like statues for trips through space.

"The big problem is not getting man into space," Dr. Lyman said in an interview Monday. "The problem is to keep him from becoming psychotic—going insane—under the unnatural conditions and confinement of space flight."

Giving man a natural environment—building space ships big enough to provide oxygen, food and social and recreational facilities—may be prohibitive in cost, Dr. Lyman believes.

The best answer, he said, is frozen sleep. The voyager would not need food, oxygen or companionship. His ship would be operated by electronic brains and he would be revived by an automatic warming process as he neared his destination.

Within two weeks, Dr. Lyman and his associates will begin dunking mice in dry ice-and-alcohol baths to reduce their temperatures to as low as 100 degrees below zero.

"Experiments with monkeys have shown that their temperature can be lowered to 39.2 degrees for up to two hours without detectable after-effects," Dr. Lyman said. "The monkeys, however, were merely in a stage of hibernation."

"What we want to do is to stop the life processes completely, then resume them at will."

"If we can do this with man, he will arrive at a distant star—which might take him several normal lifetimes to reach—not one day older than he was when he left earth."

Another frozen sleep would bring the space traveller home years or even centuries after his departure, said Dr. Lyman, and he would have aged only for the period between frozen sleeps.
